Park officials assure safety of rifle range

Residents questioning the construction o a rifle range in the basement of the Olympic Pool building were told Monday by Arlington Heights Park District commissioners that the facility will be safe.

The range, at 660 N. Ridge Ave., is being paid for by Arlington Heights High School Rifle Club members with the sanction of High School Dist. 214, Park Director Thomas Thornton said.

Carolyn Burkett, 1221 N. Harvard Ave., Arlington Heights, expressed fear about students carrying guns to Arlington Heights High School, across the street from Olympic Pool.

"ONLY RIFLE TEAM members will be authorized to use the range," Thornton said. "Ammunition will not be stored there. They will carry their rifles and ammunition with them into the facility."

"I'm very frightened by this whole thing," Mrs. Burkett said. "I don't know how the rest of the public would feel if they knew about this, but I was incredulous that this could happen here.

"I can see a building built just for this purpose," she said, "but not one that's used for a variety of purposes. How would people feel letting their children swim in the pool knowing there's shooting going on underneath."

Thornton said the facility will be open only during school days. He said because the range will be completely concrete and the entrance door will open only from the inside when the range is in use, there is no danger of an accident.

"WE'RE ONLY PROVIDING them the space," he said. "This is not a park district activity. The school administration has approved it and the school board has approved the rifle club."

"Instead of letting the children go out in the country to shoot, where they could hurt someone, I think we should control their shooting by allowing them to have a facility like this," Comr. Jacqueline J. Gruenewald said.

Thornton said he thought students would not be allowed to store guns and ammunition at the school, but would keep them in their cars or take them home.

"But what if people find out about that and start ripping off their cars looking for the guns," Mrs. Burkett said. "Then they won't be in the hands of careful people who know how to use them correctly and that scares me."

Fun fair Saturday

Chinese leaders seek to halt civil disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

THE SECOND PHASE of a long-range development program for the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, 800 W. Oakton St., is under way and plans are now being made for a retirement village on a 50-acre site north of the home. The retirement center will feature housing for elderly persons not requiring constant medical attention.

Prosecutor disputes testimony

Drug link in murder case denied

Testimony linking a former Arlington Heights resident, murdered in his Champaign home last Dec. 30, to drug sales has been called "completely fabricated" by a Champaign County prosecutor.

Thomas Knight, first assistant state's attorney, told The Herald Monday, "There is not one iota of evidence to even indicate that marijuana or narcotics was involved in the shooting" of Joseph Klein.

Eddie Bishop, 20, of Champaign, one of three suspects in the murder, testified last week that he and two friends had gone to buy marijuana from Klein shortly before he was shot to death.

KNIGHT, WHO won a guilty verdict Friday against Bishop, offered a different motive in the slaying — robbery — and said there were many conflicts in the testimony of the three suspects. It was these conflicts that helped persuade the jury to find Bishop guilty of murder after only two hours of deliberation, the prosecutor added.

Last Thursday, Bishop told the jury he was sitting in a car outside the Klein home, 205 E. Garfield St., Champaign, when two friends went in to buy marijuana.

While he was waiting, Bishop testified, he heard two shots and saw his friends running from the house.

But Knight said other evidence indicates Bishop was inside the house with his friends when the shooting occurred.

"WE EVEN suspect the shooting was an overt robbery. They might have come up with the marijuana story just to cover it," Knight said. "The sad part is that they can say whatever they want. Klein isn't here to answer."

Bishop was seen by police the day before the shooting in the neighborhood of Klein's house, while expensive stereo equipment was being moved in, the prosecutor said. Klein's old stereo had been taken in a November burglary.

"It could have been that they (the suspects) were after the stereo," Knight said.

Two .38-caliber guns were used to shoot Klein, once in the leg and once in the rib cage. Only one gun has been recovered by police, Knight said.

Klein was on the first floor of the house with his 3-year-old daughter, who was asleep when the shooting occurred. His sister, Mary, was in the basement.

Michael Lee Exum, 17, of Champaign, pleaded guilty to Klein's murder May 4. A third suspect, Bruce Owens, 19, goes on trial in October. Knight said none of the suspects were students at the University of Illinois.

Klein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Klein of 212 S. Ridge Ave., Arlington Heights, was an agronomy student at the university.

Buffalo Grove man indicted in fraud

A Buffalo Grove man Monday was indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury for allegedly defrauding the Church Federation of Greater Chicago of more than $60,000. Steven J. Miller, 31, of 265 Belaire Ct., has been charged with three counts of theft and securities law violations. Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Miller is accused of misappropriating a $60,444.28 commercial note by depositing it in the bank account of a Skokie apartment complex in which Miller had a major interest. Miller allegedly supplied the federation with false brokerage house receipts that showed the money was being reinvested for the federation, Scott said. Miller was serving as volunteer finance committee chairman for the federation when the alleged offenses took place between January and August, 1975. Miller was unavailable for comment Monday night.

Klein drug charge disputed

A Champaign County prosecutor Monday said testimony that a former Arlington Heights man was murdered in connection with a marijuana deal was "completely fabricated." Thomas Knight, first assistant state's attorney, said Monday "there was not one iota of evidence to even indicate that marijuana was involved" in the Dec. 30 shooting of Joseph Klein, a 20-year-old full-time University of Illinois student. A jury Friday found Eddie Bishop, 22, of Champaign guilty of murdering Klein, who was shot to death in his Champaign house. Bishop had testified at his trial that he waited outside while two other men accused in the slaying went inside to purchase marijuana from Klein. "We even suspect the shooting was an overt robbery," Knight said. "They might have come up with the marijuana story just to cover it."

Sprinkling offender sentenced

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation for violating the village's lawn sprinkling restriction in the first court test of the water conservation ordinance. Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lusi Ave., last week was placed on two years probation by Cook County Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time. Police issued Mrs. Bedrava a citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. She is the only sprinkling ordinance offender of about 50 to date who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said. The ordinance prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and also lawn sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

Suit filed to keep bus service

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes Monday filed suit seeking to prevent the Illinois Dept. of Transportation from cutting off employe bus service to its new Schaumburg headquarters. The class action suit filed in Cook County Circuit Court charges that cutting the commuter service will violate the constitutional rights of about 140 workers from Chicago and Elgin who have no other means of transportation and as a result may be forced to resign. The offices were moved to 1000 Plaza Dr., Schaumburg, in April, 1975. The department has provided transportation from Elgin and Chicago. The suit says, however, that the service has been ordered ended effective Friday.

Carter interview blown out of proportion

Why get excited over a little lust?

Today

Mike Klein's people

Some news reporters who occupy desks near mine insist that I am slightly "touched." They don't even hide their ill-founded opinions. "Oh, him," they tell visitors. "That's 'People,' our strange columnist."

The most energetic of them sometimes drag out large files of these columns as proof that not all hatches are securely battened down above my shoulders.

"See, mindless pap," some call this column.

"Puffery and fluffery," others insist.

"HOW DOES HE get away with that?" still other news reporters wonder.

And over in the sports department, where this all began four years ago, there is unanimous agreement. "He'll never last," the sports writers concur.

A few news reporters carry the analysis one step further. "Too many chickens who sleep on their sides like a person are inside your head," they insist. "You ought to read the newspaper."

All my life I was able to resist that temptation. Instead, I read only Playboy magazine. It has great stories. At least, that's what I've heard. I just read the pictures.

But one day the criticism and grief finally became unbearable. I couldn't take it. Perhaps a few newspapers scattered around the desk would fool everybody. They might even leave me alone.

I ROAMED DOWN the street to a bookstore where they sell Playboy magazine with its great stories and very readable pictures.

My nimble fingers deftly placed 45 cents upon the bookstore counter.

"We don't sell half a Playboy," the man said.

"No," I protested. "Do you sell newspapers?"

The man pointed toward one corner. The large stack confused me. There were newspapers from cities that I did not know. A city named Wall Street? I finally selected three Chicago newspapers.

PLAYBOY READERS always start in the center of their magazine. That's where I began with these newspapers. But there wasn't anything except ads.

Already this seemed like a wasted 45 cents. Being persistent, however, my explorer's instinct prevailed.

That's when the truth became obvious. No real difference exists between my Playboy magazines and those family newspapers. It's all the same news; I wasn't missing anything after all.

Playboy had just published this wonderful interview with Jimmy Carter, the nuclear engineer who grows peanuts.

Carter also is the Presidential candidate who said that he sometimes lusts after women.

BUT THAT IS OK, Carter said, because God understands and forgives. I could only figure that God is a sharp person who knows a good figure when seeing one.

You can imagine my surprise to discover that many newspaper columnists lamblasted Carter about his lusting. It seemed so trivial in this year of significant issues.

And what's so terrible about electing a President who is normal and lusts? It beats playing with tapes.

Playboy magazine has been into good, healthy lust for years. Hugh Hefner has proven that lust in cottontails might be even more profitable than lust in peanuts.

A genius president might encourage everyone to lust two or three hours per day. And all night long, too. Then the U. S. government could tax lust, clan up millions of dollars and wipe out our fiscal deficits.

SO LUST IS something good or so it seems. But to read all those newspaper people, you'd think they really had something new.

Lust made the front page, second page, third page and most other pages. It became the most overplayed non-story since the non-secretary from Washington described her other talents.

So many columnists reminisced about Carter's lust, and some of their own lusts, too, that I could not imagine why newspapers cost only 15 cents apiece.

Playboy readers will fork over considerably more for high-quality lust packaged in living color on glossy pages. Even second-rate lust ought to bring more than 15 cents.

There also were sidebar stories that Carter's running mate lusts, too. And one of his sons also lusts. His wife reportedly has never lusted.

BUT SO WHAT? In the long run, what does lust get any of us? Just a few moments of physical ecstasy and lots of grief later.

This finally became too much. Playboy featured more feature-length articles, better pictures, higher quality paper and ink that remained on the pages.

And a person needed to purchase just one Playboy magazine per month. Those newspapers appear so confused that they change their stories every day.

I took all these observations to my editor Monday afternoon. He listened patiently while I described all the similarities between my Playboy magazine and newspapers that everyone said I ought to read.

"What's the story?" I finally asked.

My editor looked at me through bloodshot eyes. He loosened his collar, scratched his forehead and coughed.

"Back inside your cage, kid," my editor said. "Its going to be a long week and you're already starting to bug me."

Neutron therapy in use at Fermi to fight cancer

Neutron therapy for selected volunteer cancer patients has been initiated at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill.

Neutron radiation is similar in some respects to X-ray treatments for cancer that have been available in hospitals for many years.

The main difference between neutron and X-ray radiation is that neutrons can cause greater chromosome changes in cells. Some cells which can survive X-rays are destroyed by neutron beam radiation.

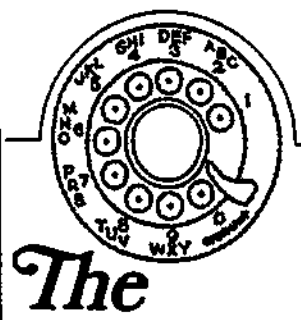

ALL THE PATIENTS who will be treated at the Fermilab will have come by referral from cancer doctors.

Certain tumors of the mouth and upper respiratory passages, advanced cancers of the cervix, prostate and some brain cancers have been treated experimentally with neutron radiation.

In addition, at Fermilab some cancers of the lung and pancreas as well as certain bone and soft tissue cancers will be irradiated in conjunction with chemotherapy.

About 1,000 of the 11,000 Chicago area cancer victims every year may be suitable for participation in the Fermilab research project. About 500 cases will be treated in the first year.

Commies calling Rhodesian peace plan tune: Smith

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith said Monday "Communists are calling the tune" behind black Africa's objections to parts of a British-American plan to end the guerrilla war and bring black majority rule to Rhodesia.

Smith declined to accept or reject the "frontline" African presidents' demand for changes in the Rhodesia peace plan reached during Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's southern Africa shuttle trip.

"We will have to wait and see what the free world is going to do about it now," he said.

A firmer indication of how the white government will react to the black leaders' demand was expected Tuesday, when the cabinet meets in weekly session.

Britain agreed Monday to try to organize a conference to form an interim multiracial government for Rhodesia, which all sides agree is a first step toward ending the escalating guerrilla war against the former colony's white supremacist regime.

In Washington, the State Department said the African presidents set no "preconditions" in their statement and "have accepted the overall package . . . They want to talk about some details."

Referring to reports the black leaders' objections to the Kissinger plan were prompted by Angola and Mozambique, the two Marxist governments among the "frontline" states, Smith said, "It looks as though maybe the Communists are calling the tune in those parts."

Smith Friday buckled under what he called "pressure on us from the free world" and accepted a U.S.-British plan brought to him by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger for Rhodesia to be governed by its 6 million black majority within two years. But another reason for his acceptance was to check the tide of whites fleeing Rhodesia, the target of escalating black guerrilla attacks.

Government figures Monday showed a record exodus of white settlers in August — 611 whites moved to Rhodesia during the month while 1,520 left the country for a record loss of 909 whites.

The leaders of Zambia, Tanzania, Botswana, Angola and Mozambique — the so-called "frontline" nations backing the Rhodesian guerrillas — Sunday rejected the makeup of a transition government proposed in the U.S.-British plan.

Under the plan, the interim government would be ruled by a half-white, half-black Council of State with a white chairman. Decisions would have to be approved by a two-thirds vote. The African leaders said whites could use this veto power to block key black proposals.

Joshua Nkomo, a moderate Rhodesian black nationalist leader, said Monday the plan as announced by Smith "had serious flaws which would make the proposed interim government unworkable." But he expressed satisfaction with the white government's acceptance of majority rule and indicated black leaders were open to negotiations.

Patty tells Harris grand jury story of abduction

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst and her former boyfriend, Steven Weed, told a grand jury behind closed doors Monday how the Symbionese Liberation Army invaded their apartment in 1974 and carried her off in one of the most bizarre kidnaps in U.S. history.

The Alameda County District Attorney's office used the couple as opening witnesses in its attempt to obtain indictments against SLA members William and Emily Harris, who allegedly participated in the abduction.

Miss Hearst, 22, daughter of San Francisco Examiner President Randolph Hearst, spent 2½ hours before the grand jury while Weed gave testimony for 30 minutes. Miss Hearst then was escorted back to the Federal Youth Center in nearby Pleasanton where she is serving a seven-year term for bank robbery.

Miss Hearst presumably repeated what she told a U.S. District Court jury in her robbery trial. At that time, she said two men and a woman forced their way into her Berkeley apartment near the University of California and carried her off, half nude and screaming.

Weed, who had shared the apartment with Miss Hearst, was struck on the head with a bottle during the abduction.

Miss Hearst had said Harris was one of the trio who entered her apartment. His wife, she said, drove a getaway car.

The Harrises were held on a 19-count police complaint filed after their capture with Miss Hearst in San Francisco Sept. 18, 1975.

The Harrises — who spent a year and a half underground with Miss Hearst before they were arrested last year — already have been charged with the kidnaping and have pleaded innocent. However, under California law an indictment would eliminate the need for a preliminary hearing scheduled for Oct. 7 in Berkeley Municipal Court and take the case directly to Alameda County Supreme Court.

Miss Hearst was brought to the Alameda County courthouse in handcuffs well before the grand jury session began from a federal prison in Pleasanton where she is serving the seven-year sentence for bank robbery she received from a federal judge last Friday.

At her trial, she told on the witness stand about how SLA member Angela Atwood appeared at the apartment door and asked to use the phone, "and then two other people came bursting behind her." Miss Atwood and the second man named by Miss Hearst, Donald (Cinque) DeFreeze, died in a fire and shootout with police in Los Angeles.

Miss Hearst said she was confronted with a pistol and thrown to the floor, "and then William Harris tied my hands behind me, because I turned around and looked at him and he grabbed my head and put it down."

She said she was hit in the face and lost consciousness for a few minutes, was put in the trunk of a car then later transferred to another vehicle. She said she could tell from the voices that Mrs. Harris was driving the second car.

Alameda County District Attorney Lowell Jensen said about 45 witnesses would testify before the grand jury, which would be asked to return indictments charging the Harrises with kidnaping, false imprisonment and assault with a deadly weapon.

The Harrises already have been convicted in Los Angeles of charges growing out of a shooting incident at a sporting goods store, and Miss Hearst is scheduled to face trial there on similar charges of kidnaping, assault and robbery in January.

PATRICIA HEARST arrives at Alameda County Courthouse in Oakland, Calif. She was the lead-off witness before a grand jury receiving evidence on the role of William and Emily Harris in her kidnap by the SLA in 1974.

U.S. plans to deport 7 ex-Nazis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Monday announced it plans to deport seven alleged former Nazi collaborators on charges they concealed past war crimes when they entered this country.

The INS said it has 80 cases under "active investigation" to determine if there is sufficient evidence to eject the suspects from this country. The INS is set to bring its first actions in one or two months, officials said.

The seven — all men, mostly in their 60s, will be charged with violating immigration laws when they entered this country shortly after World War II by concealing murders and other atrocities they allegedly committed as Nazi collaborators, the INS said.

Three have become naturalized U.S. citizens and their citizenship must be revoked by court action before they can be subjected to administrative deportation hearings, officials said.

INS Commissioner Leonard F. Chapman refused to identify the seven or say where they live. But he said some of them have been interviewed.

They are from Germany, Poland, Latvia and Lithuania but are accused of committing all the crimes as Axis concentration camp officials or in other roles in Latvia, Lithuania and Poland, officials said.

Report of oil embargo threat repudiated

The administration and the Saudi Arabian government moved quickly Monday to repudiate a report that Saudi Arabia had threatened a renewal of the 1974 oil embargo if Congress enacted legislation aimed at weakening the Arab boycott of Israel. "There has been no such warning," a State Department official said. "The Saudi government has confirmed to us that there is no such thing. The Saudi Arabian information office also issued a statement which "categorically denied" the report. The Middle East News Agency reported Sunday that Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud Al-Faisal had delivered a warning to Assistant Treasury Secretary Gerald Parsky that enactment of the anti-boycott legislation might lead to a Saudi oil embargo against the United States.

Hurricane Gloria no threat to land

A tropical depression rapidly developed into Hurricane Gloria Monday, packing winds of 75 miles an hour on a northerly course through open waters in the Atlantic. Gloria — the season's fifth hurricane — was located near latitude 26.5 north, longitude 58.0 west, about 550 miles southeast of Bermuda. The National Hurricane Center said it was heading north at about 5 m.p.h. It was reported Gloria's only possible threat to land would be to Bermuda after a day or two, but that seems unlikely.

Withdraw move to kill Saudi missile sale

At the urging of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, the Senate Monday withdrew — at least temporarily — a resolution to kill the proposed sale of $30 million in air-to-ground missiles for Saudi Arabia. Chairman John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., secured unanimous consent to send the resolution back to the Foreign Relations Committee after receiving a telephone call from Rockefeller, who said the administration was "greatly disturbed." Sparkman's action, with only a few senators on the floor, came as a surprise to the resolution's backers, including Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, who was not notified.

300,000 workers strike in Spain

More than 300,000 workers went out on a general strike Monday in Spain's Basque region to mark the first anniversary of the Franco regime's execution of two Basque separatists and three Maoist revolutionaries. Riot police used truncheons and fired rubber bullets and smoke grenades at youthful demonstrators in downtown Madrid who set off small explosive charges under parked cars and used the disabled vehicles to barricade streets. The strikes and demonstrations were aimed at gaining government concession of a "total amnesty" that would free imprisoned Basque guerrillas and others not affected by King Juan Carlos' partial amnesty in August.

Lebanon shooting postpones peace talks

Christian rightists peppered Beirut's "green line" buffer zone with sniper fire Monday, forcing President Elias Sarkis to postpone peace talks with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat for the second day. Palestinian spokesmen, meanwhile, charged two Israeli gunboats and a helicopter attacked a yacht carrying Lebanese leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt to Cyprus. Jumblatt, who was on his way to Cairo for talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, was unhurt. Reporters who saw the 97-foot motor launch Phoenicia in Limassol, Cyprus, said it had what appeared to be bullet holes in some sections and its outer hull was damaged, apparently by a dynamite explosion.

Syrians cheer as three hotel terrorists hanged

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI) — Syria hanged three pro-Palestinian guerrillas at dawn Monday outside the hotel they raided just 24 hours earlier. Hundreds of cheering Damascus residents gathered in the streets to view their bodies.

The bodies dangled from the gallows opposite the hotel until midmorning to show Syria's swift action against terrorism. Palestinians said they feared the executions may signify a crackdown on the guerrilla groups.

Damascus Radio said the three were charged with "crimes against the security and integrity of our people" for invading the luxury Semiramis hotel Sunday and taking 90 hostages in a bloody bid to force the release of 33 jailed terrorists.

Syrian troops stormed the building and killed the group's leader in a four-hour battle in which four of the hostages died and 34 were injured, including four Americans.

The three captured guerrillas went on Syrian television Sunday night and said they were members of Al Fatah—the largest guerrilla group under the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In a Monday morning broadcast, President Hafez Assad, who personally approved the death sentences, denounced the "behavior of some Palestine Liberation Organization leaders whose main concern is to attack Syria."

The guerrillas were hanged at dawn — just 24 hours after they staged their attack.

Hundreds of Damascus residents, shouting slogans praising Assad's quick action, condemned Iraq for alleged involvement in the raid and demanded punishment for Al Fatah leaders.

Other chanting demonstrators roamed through the city in groups demanding the execution of the prisoners the guerrillas wanted released, witnesses said.

In Beirut, a PLO spokesman denied "flatly any connection" with the guerrilla attack and Palestinian sources said they believed guerrilla renegade Abu Nidal, head of the breakaway Fatah faction based in Baghdad, was responsible.

"We think Abu Nidal, in his hatred for both us and the Syrians, did this, but we are still worried the Syrians may try using it as a pretext for cracking down on Fatah in Syria or launching terrorist attacks in Lebanon," a PLO official said.

Carter links poverty-GOP; Ford vows battle on crime

By United Press International

Jimmy Carter blamed Republicans for a record increase in poverty Monday, while President Ford promised to spend the first 100 days of his next term rallying Americans to battle crime.

A newly released New York Times-CBS News poll showed Ford adding some support since Labor Day in his struggle to catch up with Carter, and said more voters thought the President won last Thursday's debate on domestic topics.

Carter, possibly reflecting the view that he scored points on unemployment in the debate, returned to that subject Monday and used a new Census Bureau report on poverty to fuel his campaign speeches.

Comparing his own economic policies to John Kennedy's and Lyndon Johnson's, the Democratic presidential candidate told a regional labor conference in Portland, Ore., 26 million Americans "cannot earn an adequate income" under the administrations of Ford and Richard Nixon.

He credited Democrats with cutting nearly in half the percentage of Americans living below the poverty line before Nixon took office.

"Mr. Nixon and Mr. Ford have made these people poorer in the same way as Mr. Hoover in the 1930s — by denying them the chance to work," Carter said.

He called Ford "a President who sees numbers instead of people when he thinks of unemployment and inflation," and said Republicans "have become the party not of work, but of welfare."

The census report said 2.5 million more Americans fell below the poverty line in 1975 — the largest jump in one year since the government began keeping income records in 1959.

Ford, exuding confidence his campaign is clicking now, wound up a three-day political trip across the South Monday by pledging if elected to begin a 100-day crusade to rally Americans behind federal anti-crime legislation.

"It is time to give the streets back to law-abiding citizens and to put the criminals behind bars," he told a Miami conference of the national police chiefs association.

"Too many politicians are underestimating the public's concern about crime," Ford said, blaming Congress for failing to pass administration legislation.

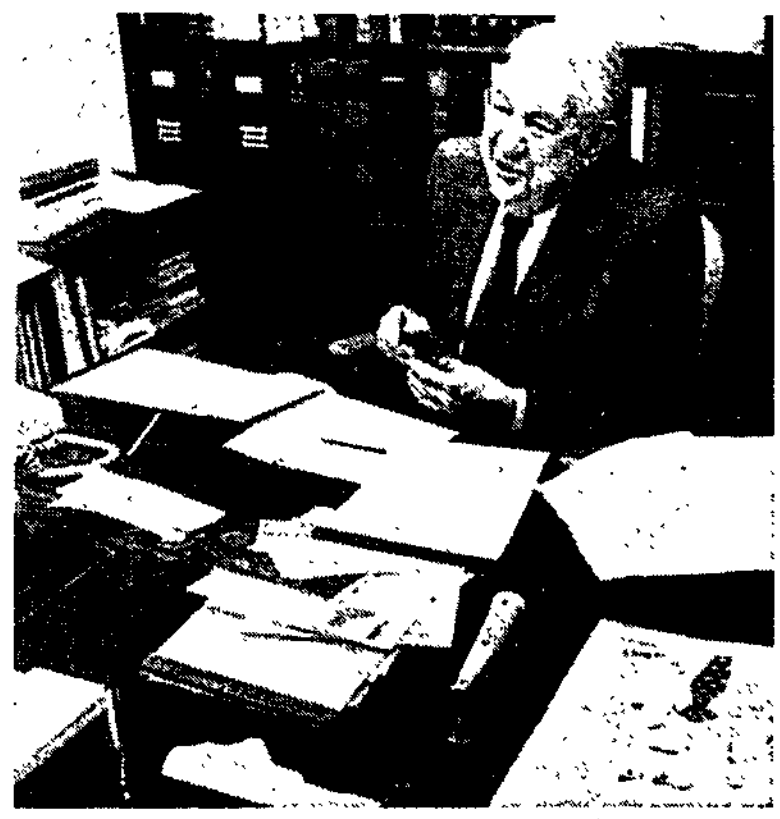

"I serve notice today that a top priority of the first 100 days beginning with inauguration day for the Ford administration next January will be a rally of America behind federal anti-crime legislation."

Chief of Staff Richard Cheney said Ford's southern campaign "eroded" Carter's strength there, and predicted Ford would carry "a number" of southern states Nov. 2.

The new Times-CBS poll found 37 per cent of 1,167 respondents thought Ford won Thursday's debate, 35 per cent thought it was a draw and 24 per cent favored Carter.

"The debate appears to have been one factor, though by no means the dominant one, in a general improvement in Ford's position since the last Times-CBS poll three weeks ago," the Times said.

Almost half those surveyed said the debate made "no difference" in their preference. But one-third said it made them surer of their decisions, and 3 per cent said they switched — 2 per cent to Ford and 1 per cent to Carter. The survey also found "the President has cut roughly in half his Democratic rival's national lead."

Ervin marks 80th birthday

People

• Former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. turned 80 Monday and spent the day working. During the weekend, Ervin, a North Carolina Democrat who retired in December 1974 after a 20-year Senate career that included chairing the Watergate Committee, shared his formula for a long and healthy life. "The best way is to live one day at a time and don't worry too much about what happened yesterday and don't fear too much what's going to happen tomorrow," he said.

• It looked at first as if President Ford did what many other hotel guests do — swiped a couple of towels from the room. Reporters grinned when they looked into the back seat of the executive limousine Sunday and saw towels from the Hyatt-Regency Hotel in New Orleans. The hotel's manager, however, said everything was above board. The Secret Service asked for the towels and the hotel gladly complied. The hotel made $50,000 during the presidential party's stay.

• Porno movie queen Marilyn Chambers, 24, who was arrested recently for indecent exposure and dancing nude in an establishment that serves food, has been ordered to appear personally at her upcoming trial on misdemeanor charges. California law does not require defendants to attend misdemeanor trials unless the judge has a reason to order the appearance. The prosecutor said he asked for the order because he might want Miss Chambers to re-enact her performance during the trial.

Advocate claims mail overcharged

Time was when the butcher or the grocer was accused of weighing his products with a heavy hand. Now it's the postman.

Celia Maloney, Gov. Daniel Walker's consumer advocate, said Monday post offices in the six county Chicago area may have overcharged customers more than $20 million a year because of faulty weighing procedures. Mrs. Maloney blamed scales that failed to register zero and "sloppy procedures" for the inflated costs. The mistakes appeared to be honest, she said, and she found no evidence of fraud.

Investigators visited 42 of the 159 posts in the metropolitan area where they presented three letters and three parcels for weighing, she said. The weighing and the correct assessment of postage was correct less than one-third of the time, she said. The errors, Mrs. Maloney said, could result in a net profit for the postal service of 5 per cent. "In the city of Chicago alone, this means that Chicago post offices collected almost $20 million profit at the expense of the consumers last year," she said.

Shotgun blast hits cop in face

Chicago policeman Lloyd N. Taylor, 28, was shot in the face with a shotgun on the city's West Side Monday night. He was listed in critical condition at Mount Sinai Hospital. Patrolman Frank Cunningham said Taylor and his partner, Ocie R. High, were responding to a call of a gunman in an apartment building on the West Side. The officers were dressed in plain clothes. A single shotgun blast hit Taylor in the face, neck and left arm, a hospital spokesman said. Two suspects were taken into custody, police said, but no charges were placed against them immediately.

Pact reached in Bensenville

A tentative agreement was reached in the Bensenville high school strike Monday, and classes reopened at four elementary schools in the Chicago suburb of Midlothian. However, teachers at three Niles Township high schools in Skokie remained on strike. James Cahill, a spokesman for the Bensenville teachers, said tentative agreement on a new two-year pact was reached early Monday and classes would resume Tuesday.

James Santoro, spokesman for Midlothian District 143, said negotiators for the 120 teachers and the school board reached tentative agreement Sunday night after 28 hours of continuous talks. Officials of Nile: School District 219 were to meet Monday night to consider firing the striking teachers. School officials at Niles East, West and North high schools said they will open the schools Tuesday with or without the striking teachers. They said they would use applicants recently interviewed to replace the strikers.

New trial ordered for Evans

The murder conviction of Michael Evans, 17, Chicago, was set aside Monday and a new trial ordered in the slaying of 9-year-old Lisa Cabassas. Criminal Court Judge Earl E. Strayhorn said he ordered the new trial because the state withheld evidence concerning prosecution witness Judith Januszewski that could have been of "significant importance" to Evans' defense. Evans was convicted of abducting, raping and murdering the girl Jan. 15 in a seven-day bench trial in which Mrs. Januszewski's testimony placed Davis near the abduction site.

Th motion for a new trial was filed last week by Evans' attorney, Sam Adam, who said he had not been told Mrs. Januszewski had been given state funds to change her residence after her life was threatened.

Fights break out at school

Fights between black and Latin students broke out Monday near Rezin Orr High School and police arrested 31 persons, including three carying handguns, police said. Principal Kenneth R. Van Spankeren said he believed four or five youths were injured in the fighting. No shooting was reported. Classes at the school on Chicago's West Side were suspended for the day shortly after noon. Van Spankeren said the fighting "stemmed from outsiders" who were not students. Groups of black and Latin youths threw bottles and bricks across the street at each other and there were at least three fights, the principal said. Classes will resume today.

HUD director defends loans

John L. Waner, area director of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, Monday joined HUD Sec. Carla Hills in defending the granting of low-interest government loans to affluent homeowners on the city's near North Side. Mrs. Hills said the $2.2 million in loans, distributed under a program for home improvements in urban renewal or community development neighborhoods, was not based on the homeowners' incomes because the law authorizing the loans set no such limits.

Lincoln Park homeowners and real estate investors received the federal money in 1973 and 1974 and used it to finance the addition of fireplaces, parquet floors, spotlights and other luxury features to apartments. The project was criticized by a U.S. General Accounting Office report sent to HUD. Mrs. Hills and Waner said the GAO report did not consider the incomes of the tenants, but rather that of the homeowners.

Illinois briefs

Seek disclosure of campaign funds

Court proceedings may be started against some candidates and several political committees for failure to comply with the campaign financing law, Chairman Franklin Lunding of the Illinois Election Board said Monday. Lunding said the board's campaign disclosure section had determined "a substantial number" of political organizations have not made full and proper disclosures. Some candidates also have refused to file disclosure statements. The chairman said he has scheduled a meeting for 4 p.m. in Springfield today to decide on a course of action. State law requires candidates to make public disclosure of all contributors who give more than $150 to a candidate. Political committees also must disclose certain expenditures and keep records of most smaller donations.

Carter to visit area again

Jimmy Carter will campaign in Chicago and other parts of Illinois Oct. 10 and 11, his Chicago office announced Monday. A Carter office spokesman said further details of the trip will be made public in the next few days. Carter has been in Illinois only once since he won the Democratic presidential nomination in July. During that appearance earlier this month, he campaigned in Springfield, Peoria, Champaign, Evergreen Park and Chicago.

Marion woman found slain

A 20-year-old Marion woman was found shot to death Monday in her home and her husband was held for questioning, authorities said. Michael Wiseman, director of the Williamson County Detective Unit, identified the victim as Barbara Proper. Wiseman said her husband, Arnold, 40, a concrete company worker, was being held in county jail for investigation and that charges were pending in the case. The name of the victim was withheld several hours until relatives were notified. Wiseman said the couple formerly lived in Lockport and moved to Marion less than a year ago.

After charges of department waste

Dunne seeks road crew records

Cook County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said Monday he has asked for the work records of county highway department vehicles cited in a Better Government Assn. report charging waste in the department.

The BGA has charged that road crews staffing county highway trucks do no more than two or three hours of work per day. BGA investigators observed maintenance crews on 19 days during the past summer.

Dunne said Monday he had asked County Comr. Matthew Bieszczat, head of the county board roads and bridges committee, and Highway Supt. Hugo Stark for the records of cases cited by the BGA.

"WE WILL SEE WHAT revelations there are in those records," Dunne said. "Then we can evaluate the situation."

The BGA investigation reported that some county highway employes did not get on the highway until an hour or 1½ hours after starting time, made numerous stops for shopping trips, meals and coffee breaks and quit work early.

On Aug. 3, three maintenance men in a truck in the Northwest suburbs left the maintenance garage at 8:30 a.m., 1½ hours after starting time, had a 25-minute breakfast in Arlington Heights, stopped at a hardware store in Palatine and arrived at the work site at 9:58 a.m. at Bartlett and Penny roads near Barrington, investigators said.

Once they arrived at the job site, the BGA said, they worked for one hour and 17 minutes.

FIVE YEARS AGO, after a similar BGA investigation, the county board hired a consulting firm for $150,000 to investigate the highway department. BGA officials said the county rejected the firm's recommendations to cut back on department staff. Instead 20 employes were suspended for taking unauthorized coffee breaks.

BGA officials said after the last study that Dunne "promised reform, but the same old politics of patronage continue."

Dunne said Monday he does not anticipate another study of the operations of the highway department because of the BGA study.

"We paid quite a bit for that study and in some cases we got good reasons why some (recommendations) couldn't be done," he said.

GOP has farm belt problems: Dole

MOLINE, Ill. (UPI) — Republican vice presidential candidate Robert Dole, chosen as President Ford's running mate because of his ties to agriculture, conceded Monday the GOP does not have the "comfortable margin" it needs in the farm belt.

In a speech before 2,000 enthusiastic students at Augustana College, the Kansas senator accused Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter of "a certain amount of hypocrisy" for criticizing loopholes, but taking $41,000 off his taxes by using the investment tax credit.

He also hit Carter for criticizing the Domestic International Sales Corp.

"Was he deliberately misrepresenting this valuable farm export incentive, or is it just another case of Carter not knowing what he was talking about when it comes to tax reform?" Dole asked.

DOLE DEPARTED from his text to challenge Carter to reveal his tax records for the past 10 years.

"He ought to tell us who figured out his income taxes," he said. "Who figured out his savings," Dole asked. "Why hasn't he given the American people a summary of his tax returns for the past 10 years as President Ford has done and Senator Dole has done? How many loopholes has he taken in the past 10 years?"

He said in reference to Carter, "Most Americans understand that those on the outside will do most anything to get on the inside. But I'm not certain most Americans know quite how far Carter has gone."

Dole told reporters aboard his "Campaign Express," the Republican ticket is not, as some have reported, "slipping in farm regions."

BUT HE SAID, "In rural areas where we're strong we ought to be beefing up. We ought to be way ahead and we're not."

Dole said the GOP looked at the Midwest as a source of strength, as it usually is, but "we don't have that comfortable margin that Carter has in the South."

Dole already has identified last year's grain embargo and current low crop prices as the reason for the party's "trouble" in rural America.

Probe of president criticized as unfair

MOLINE, Ill. (UPI) — Robert Dole Monday repeated charges of unfair investigations by the Wateragte splaice vestigations by the Watergate special prosecutor of President Ford's previous congressional campaigns.

Dole, who has testified before a grand jury about alleged Gulf Oil Co. payments to his 1974 senatorial campaign, was asked what effect special prosecutor Charles Ruff's probe into Ford's financial records would have on this campaign.

"I don't know — it's all one sided. But we expect that," he said at a news conference.

Dole said, "I don't see him (Ruff) looking any other place."

"Where should they be looking?" Dole was asked.

"They ought to be looking everywhere, I guess. I think it's rather coincidental that this would arise right now," he said.

An aide suggested that "There's a certain amount of identification by farmers with Carter."

DOLE, APPARENTLY relying on Ford campaign polling plus his own intuition, said his ticket is ahead in Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado and trailing in Iowa, Ohio and Minnesota.

He said the race was "50-50" in Pennsylvania.

Dist. 23 faculty to vote on strategy

by JUDY JOBBITT

Prospect Heights Dist. 23 teachers will vote today on what actions they will take to make the Dist. 23 Board of Education "compromise" issues in contract talks and bring negotiations back to the bargaining table.

Teachers' union officials met last week to discuss what actions will be presented to the teachers. David Kessler, union negotiator, said the first action will be taken within a week with the teachers' approval.

He refused to release details of the actions being considered until they are presented to the teachers. However, he said, "These first things are not involved with taking away from the education process and will not involve the children at all."

HE SAID THE union has not been contacted by the board since the teachers broke off negotiations two weeks ago.

A stalemate was reached over the terms of a compromise proposal for setting up a committee to investigate alternative methods of pay to the current merit system.

The teachers charged that the board was unwilling to compromise the proposals for the committee. The board wants the committee to look into all methods of determining salary increases, including the current system which the teachers want to drop.

The teachers asked that the board add the current board maternity policy and policy for releasing tenured teachers to the contract in exchange for allowing the committee to look into all alternatives.

THE TEACHERS also demanded that an early retirement policy be negotiated.

The board negotiators agreed to consider an early retirement policy but said the maternity policy and policy for reducing the teaching staff are not negotiable.

"We will start doing some actions to convince the board that the teachers really do want to get this thing settled," Kessler said. "They (the board) are willing to discuss but they're not willing to compromise to make the discussion meaningful."

The king and queen wil be crowned at 2 p.m. Friday in the gym.

The homecoming parade starts at 2:45 p.m. Friday. The football games begin at 6 p.m. with the junior varsity game. The Rolling Meadows varsity team will play the Conant High School team from Hoffman Estates at 8 p.m.

The homecoming dance will be at 8 p.m. Saturday in the gymnasium.

The way we see it

Legislators compromise worth it

The Illinois General Assembly has approved a compromise state school aid plan that could solve some of the problems facing schools.

The lawmakers avoided the temptation to include a lot of extraneous, non-education matters and that is commendable. What's not is that they spent three weeks and thousands of the taxpayers' dollars to work out the compromise plan.

The final roadblock cleared by the legislature allows for the speed-up of the collection of sales tax receipts. When added to another tax speedup plan for income taxes the state will get $50 million needed to finance the changes in the school aid formula.

The money will ensure that no school district receives less state aid this year because of the formula revisions. The legislature also provides a $23 million break for Chicago schools which were penalized for closing early last spring.

The most sensible act seems to be the decision by the Illinois General Assembly to collect only as much taxes as needed to finance the education proposal.

If the lawmakers had gone ahead with Gov. Daniel Walker's full acceleration plan, he would have had an extra $45 million to spend.

Walker had promised not to spend the extra money, but lawmakers wisely decided not to take any chances. If they decide the additional money is needed to get the state through the fiscal year, additional measures can be enacted when the legislature returns after the election or early next year.

The new formula revision, which can now take effect immediately, will aid local school districts. Those districts with declining enrollment will be able to average their attendance figures so that a large amount of state aid will not be lost when enrollment drops.

School districts also will not be required to reduce their tax rates as the amount of state aid received increases. The provision was fought for by a number of suburban lawmakers who believe that local residents ought to have the final say over how much money is going to be directed into education spending on the local level.

Bakalis set good example by admitting mistake

Political candidates frequently say that campaigns are a learning experience for them.

In the case of Michael Bakalis, Democratic candidate for comptroller, this is apparently true, at least as far as one proposal he made several weeks ago affecting the news media is concerned.

Bakalis announced some time ago that if elected comptroller, he would start a procedure in which newspaper reporters looking at state financial documents under his control would have to record with his office what they were investigating and why.

Bakalis's proposal seemed at the time to be one more example of how public officials get together to protect themselves and each other from scrutiny.

It wasn't hard for reporters to look at Bakalis's proposal and believe that if they indicated what they were investigating through state records that the next thing that would happen would be that the subject of the investigation would be notified.

Bakalis has had second thoughts about his proposal, however. As a result, he this week issued a press release saying he has reversed his stand.

Instead, Bakalis said, "once a reporter or other citizen checked into the facility where files are kept, no further record would be kept as to which files or documents were examined."

In explaining his change of position, Bakalis said, "My conversations with the press have convinced me that to require records of who is looking at what documents would hamper the secrecy of press investigations and hamper the nature of competitive journalism."

It's good to see that Bakalis is wise enough to change his mind when he discovers he is wrong.

Plutonium key to near-nuclear power

by NEA/London Economist News Service

One of the nicest things about President Idi Amin of Uganda, Colonel Muammar Quaddafi of Libya, Ian Smith of Rhodesia, the Provisional IRA and the Baader-Meinhof gang is that none of them has any nuclear weapons. Not yet. If in a few years' time an A-bomb becomes almost as normal an item in everybody's armories as a grenade or a submachinegun, the condition of mankind will be drastically changed.

How could this happen?

Too easily.

You — or, at least, your fairly average MIT student — can design a bomb in five weeks, using only the information that is obtainable in libraries. You need only a dozen pounds of plutonium; and all over the world there are reactors blithely creating the stuff as a mere byproduct of electric power, at a rate already nearing 25 tons a year.

India demonstrated two years ago just how easy it is to evade controls and use the by-product to make a bomb. And this week Henry Kissinger admitted the "high probability" that some heavy water which the Americans supplied to India for its nuclear power plants had been instrumental in producing the plutonium for India's 1974 nuclear explosion.

This revelation, along with the American decision last month to sell still more uranium to India, was clearly one reason why Pakistan's Ali Bhutto would not be persuaded by Kissinger this week not to buy a nuclear processing plant from France.

Plans are now being considered in America and Britain for reducing the risk of plutonium being stolen by mixing it with uranium before stockpiling. A further idea, which the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) in Washington would like to pursue, is that the used fuel rods from enriched-uranium reactors should be promptly recycled in natural-uranium ones of the Canadian type. This "tandem cycle" could reduce the rods' plutonium content to a less alarming level before they lose their protective radioactivity.

Good, but not good enough.

Some potential plutonium thieves may be baffled by these devices, if and when and where they are adopted; but the pickings could still be good elsewhere, with power plants in many different countries churning out the deadly stuff and frightening quantities of it being moved around.

Such a world is not far away. President Ford gave warning on July 29, when he issued the ACDA's latest annual report, that by 1985 there will probably be nearly 40 countries whose reactors have created enough plutonium to make bombs, in addition to the six existing members of the "nuclear club."

The "near-nuclear" 40 include, by most reckonings, about 25 states that have ratified the non-proliferation treaty, thus binding themselves not to acquire the bomb and agreeing to let all their nuclear installations be inspected by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

But there are at least a dozen countries that have not ratified the treaty and are thought to have the option to go nuclear by 1985 at the latest. They include Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, Egypt, Indonesia, Israel, Pakistan, South Africa, Spain, Switzerland and Turkey.

It cannot be assumed that the option is renounced forever merely by ratification of the NPT — because the treaty permits withdrawal under the pressure of "extraordinary events." But this does not mean that the NPT is useless. The treaty has created a mechanism which, if operated at full power, could even now avert the nuclear nightmare.

Up to now, however, the mechanism has been worked half-heartedly and hypocritically by too many of the NPT parties — including the United States, which in Lyndon Johnson's day was the treaty's foremost champion. As a result, non-parties have actually been given incentives not to adhere to it.

Under the treaty, a party should not supply nuclear equipment and material to another state unless that state lets the IAEA apply its safeguards to all of the nuclear material in its possession, "for the exclusive purpose of verification of fulfillment of its obligations assumed under this treaty."

To the plain man, the NPT text means, plainly, no supplies to non-parties; a highly effective device for encouraging adherence to the treaty, as nuclear equipment and reactor fuel are still exported by only a few countries (and even France, the only non-party among the exporters, has promised to behave as if it were a party).

Disastrously, the Americans led the other exporters in quibbling their way round this commitment. And now the chickens have come home to roost.

The Germans and French have undertaken to sell, respectively to Brazil and Pakistan (which are not NPT parties), whole nuclear fuel cycles — not just reactors, but processing plants for uranium enrichment and plutonium separation; a virtually complete do-it-yourself kit for bomb makers.

Feathers are ruffled and the roost resounds with agitated clucking. American protests at the French and German moves might, however carry more conviction if the Americans had not recently competed — unsuccessfully — against the French for a contract to supply two big reactors to South Africa (not a treaty party), and agreed to sell a big reactor to Spain (not a treaty party), and flirted with an Indian nuclear deal.

At the moment an exporting state can sometimes claim that, however inadequate the safeguards it writes into its own deals may be, they are a bit tighter than the agency's.

Given a real effort in the next year or two, including a thorough overhaul of the treaty's mechanism and the agency's safeguards system, there is still a fair chance of heading off the arrival of a world in which the bomb will be available to several dozen governments, some of them flickeringly unstable, and also to any terrorist gang that can snatch nuclear materials, or even whole weapons, from wherever they are worst guarded.

But it looks as if the effort will not be made, primarily because some of the exporting states' governments will not restrain firms that are eager for profitable deals.

Male eye has mind of its own

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The human eye performs a number of reflexive actions. We may, for example, blink or bat our eyes without being aware we are doing it. Our eyes may fill with tears at times when we are trying to avoid weeping. They may roll up in their sockets, betraying the astonishment we wish to conceal.

And whether we like it or not, the eye will occasionally ogle.

That last reaction, known in medical terminology as "roving eye," is, I think, the central factor in the controversy over Jimmy Carter's revelation in Playboy that he had "looked on a lot of women with lust."

There may be legitimate grounds for disagreement over whether the Democratic presidential candidate's interview with the magazine was politically prudent.

But from a purely physiological standpoint, individuals cannot be held accountable for amatory eyeball movements.

One of the world's leading authorities on the "roving eye" phenomenon is Dr. Werner von Glint, an ophthalmologist who does research on a Capitol Hill street corner outside the House office building where Elizabeth Ray once worked.

Despite his heavy schedule of experiments, which take place each time a congressional secretary passes by, he agreed to an interview, which I hope to sell to Playboy as a sequal to the Carter Q. and A. Excerpts follow:

Q. Dr. von Glint, what causes ogling anyway?

A. Putting it as simply as possible, ogling results from overloading the retina with stimulatory images. In other words, when we get an eyeful, we ogle.

Q. What's the difference between ogling and leering?

A. Leering is a conscious ocular manifestation of ardor. When one deliberately looks on a woman with lust, one leers. Ogling on the other hand is an involuntary transfixation of the eye on a lust-inducing object. It's a matter of the sensory nerves of the eye responding to external stimuli even though one may be trying to get one's mind on something else.

Q. Are you saying that a person has no control over his ogling?

A. That is correct. When it encounters a lust-inducing object, the eyeball functions independently of conscientious mental direction. The luster literally cannot take his eyes off the lustee.

Q. Then there's no reason for a wife to get upset when her husband ogles another woman?

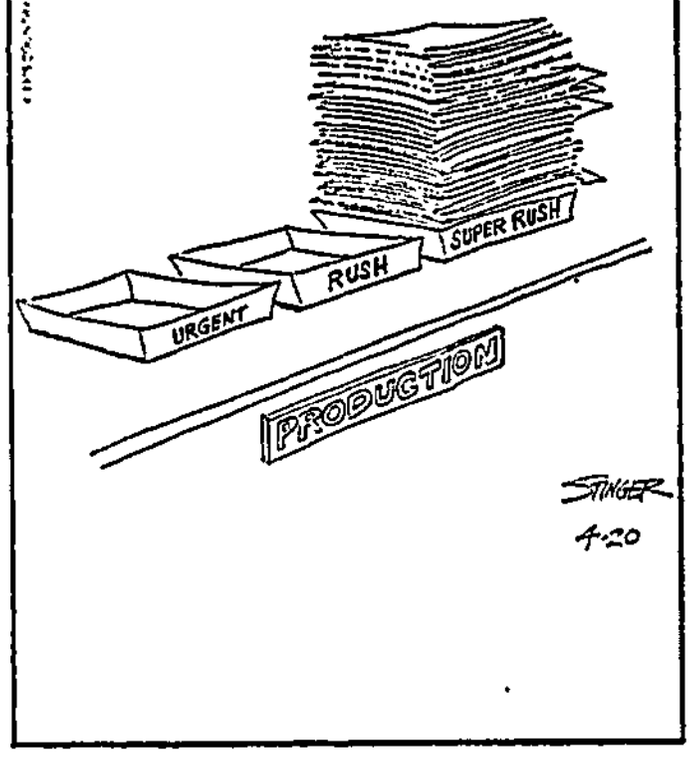

A. Right. If the other woman is an eyeful, he can no more keep from looking on her with lust than a liberal can keep his knee from jerking when he hears the word "reform."

Q. Is there any cure for "roving eye," like maybe special glasses?

A. If the luster is myopic or astigmatic, ogling can be prevented by hiding his glasses. Otherwise, the only thing that helps is wearing blinders.

GM unveils new line of '77 vans, trucks

The GMC 1977 model truck lineup, announced Monday, features new offerings in the cutomized van market and a new heavy duty conventional cab truck.

Robert Truxell, a GMC vice president, said the new models give GMC the most versatile truck line in company history.

Truxell said the company will meet the increasing demand for customized vans by introducing the Gypsy Traveler model, a Vandura van with an interior by Motortown Corp., of Dearborn, Mich. The model is available in half-ton and quarter-ton versions.

Gypsy Traveler features include portholo windows, fully carpeted walls, floor and ceiling and exterior striping. Options permit buyers to customize their vans and transport a variety of cargo and passengers.

The GMC pickups, Jimmy and Suburban models, feature new grills and larger door trim panels. Among the new options are an inside hood latch and intermittent windshield washer.

The Sarge is a new model for 1977. It is a "wideside" pickup with color and trim similar to a new General model heavy duty conventional truck.

The General features a welded aluminum cab, a fiberglass hood and fender assembly. Other changes in medium and heavy-duty trucks include improved fuel economy and serviceability.

THE NEW 1977 GMC Gypsy Traveler is designed to meet the demand for customized vans. It features carpeted walls, floor and ceiling.

Firm to celebrate anniversary Friday

Easy Travel Service will celebrate the grand opening of a Schaumburg branch office and the firm's 25th anniversary from 4 to 8 p.m. Friday.

Barbara Faber, manager, has invited area residents and business executives to participate in the event at 652 S. Roselle Rd., Weatherway Plaza.

Music, refreshments, participation of airline representatives and drawings for two expense-paid vacations will be featured.

United Airlines to buy more 727s

United Airlines Pres. Richard Ferris recently announced the firm will order an undetermined number of Boeing 727-200 aircraft before the end of 1976, subject to approval by the United and UAL Inc. parent firm boards of directors.

Ferris said the airline also may purchase additional McDonnell Douglas DC-10 aircraft. The new planes will replace DC8 aircraft as a fuel economy measure.

Ferris said the airline will finish 1976 in the black, following first quarter losses of nearly $43 million. For the first eight months of the year, UAL's consolidated net earnings from airline operations totaled $14.32 million compared to $23.96 million a year earlier.

Chrysler sued for EPA violations

The Justice Dept. Monday asked a federal court to levy more than $91 million in penalties against the Chrysler Corp. for allegedly selling 1976 Plymouths and Dodges without valid clean air certificates. In a civil suit filed in U. S. District Court in Washington, D. C., the department charged Chrysler sold 9,185 cars without valid certificates of the Environmental Protection Agency that they conformed to the Clean Air Act. Chrysler branded the suit "incredible." The company added that when it discovered the error it notified the EPA, straightened out the problem in production, recalled the cars and corrected them to conform to the reports made to EPA.

Osco clerks to vote on contract

Some 2,200 United Retail Workers Union members employed at Osco Drug stores in the Chicago area will vote in Hillside Wednesday on a proposed contract agreement. The vote will be at 8 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, 4400 Frontage Rd. The tentative agreement was reached Saturday following union picketing at area Osco outlets. Picketing began Sept. 20 at an Osco distribution center in Elk Grove Village. It spread Friday to all the firm's area outlets. Union spokesman Ed Jablonski said the strike, suspended pending the ratification vote, will resume if the new contract proposal is rejected.

August trade deficit 3rd largest

The United States posted its third largest trade deficit ever in August, despite a major reduction in oils imports, the government said Monday. In its monthly report on trade, the Commerce Dept. said the nation imported $757.7 million more in goods than it exported last month. To date, the United States has a $2.6 billion deficit for the year. At the same time last year, the nation had a $7.1 billion surplus. If the present pace continues, the department predicts the nation will post a $3.9 billion deficit in 1976.

Ford-UAW resume full talks

Negotiators for Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers resumed "main table" bargaining Monday amid reports that progress was being made to settle a 13-day-old nationwide strike by 170,000 Ford workers. The afternoon meeting of the full negotiating committees was the first such session since last Thursday. The session followed weekend meetings involving only the two top company men and their two union counterparts.

British pound falls to record low

The battered pound plummeted below $1.70 to its lowest level in history Monday, undermined by new worries about the British economy and fears that nothing could stem its slide. When markets opened, the pound plunged at once through the so-called "psychological barrier" of $1.70, lost almost 2½ cents in a few minutes and closed at an all-time low of $1.6810.

Panel hints at aluminum cartel

Three aluminum producers — Alcoa, Reynolds and Kaiser — were able to raise prices during the recession, an action the Council on Wage and Price Stability says indicates they are close to pinching off competition. But the council, a White House price-watching agency, stopped short of saying the three corporations were guilty of wrongdoing. The three control 70 per cent of the aluminum industry. The council published 243 pages, but deleted 350 pages, including references to proposals that the three giants should be broken up to increase competition.

Dow rallies in moderate trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Investors, encouraged because the Federal Reserve didn't change money policy and Saudi Arabia won't press for an oil boycott, staged a late rally Monday, driving prices higher in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

After trailing fractionally much of the day, the Dow Jones industrial average rallied to gain 3.82 points to 1,013.13, close to the 44-month high of 1,014.79 set Sept. 21. The blue-chip average lost 1.49 points Friday, but gained 14.21 last week.

OBSERVERS SAID the rally was sparked by signs the Fed does not plan to tighten credit after last week's report of a record $4.5 billion rise in the nation's basic money supply.

Helping fuel the buying drive was a Saudi Arabian denial of a report it planned to press for an oil embargo similar to that of 1973 if Congress insisted on pushing for legislation aimed at the Arab economic boycott of Israel.

The NYSE common stock index gained 0.24 to 57.26 and the average price of a common share increased 15 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, gained 0.46 to 107.26.

ADVANCES TOPPED declines, 816 to 562, among 1,865 issues. The 487 unchanged issues showed there was some investor uncertainty about the market.

Volume totaled 17,430,000 shares, compared with 17,400,000 traded Friday.

Prices closed mixed in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange.

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Bodybuilding needs carbohydrate stores

I am interested in bodybuilding so I have two questions. I have found that from the time you eat until the time food has passed through the small intestine, then into the bloodstream takes seven hours. Would that be a good time to work out to get better results when the food gets to the bloodstream?

I have calculated that to gain weight actually one pound of protein takes about seven gallons of milk. I've planned on doing this weekly, but I've heard the body would reject the milk in such great quantity. Is this so and would it be a good idea?

You might to to your nearest YMCA or if you are in school to your physical education teacher and ask about a good program for you. Your ideas are far from the facts of the situation.

Food enters the bloodstream after it has been broken down by digestion. Most of the absorption takes place in the first part of the small intestine. Some foods are absorbed right away after leaving the stomach and entering the intestine, not seven hours later. For example, if a person drinks sugar water on an empty stomach the blood sugar (glucose) will rise usually within 30 minutes and certainly within one hour.

The importance of eating in relation to physical activity is the need for nourishment and it should be planned so that you are not stuffed with excessive bulk. Otherwise it is not too important. The stores of carbohydrates already in the muscle fibers are what you need for much of your workout.

YOU CERTAINLY don't need seven gallons of milk for each pound of muscle. Perhaps you think you need a pound of protein for each pound of muscle. That is not the case. About 75 per cent of the lean muscle is water. Only 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of the pound of muscle is actually protein. A good diet with sufficient calories and 100 grams of good quality protein is usually adequate for muscle building.

Too much milk may affect a person with a limited ability to tolerate lactose, the double sugar in milk.

To give you a better background on weight training and principles involved, to try to keep you out of trouble, I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Four rules to follow when buying honeydew

Dear Dorothy: Are there any reasonably good rules one can follow in picking honeydew melons? My family loves 'em, but I'm lucky when they're just right — even when I ask the supermarket people to help. — Georgia Healey

We all have this trouble, Georgia. There are four things to look for. The color should be creamy yellow. The skin should have a kind of velvety feel. The aroma should be there — but faintly so. The fourth and most important is the stem end. It should yield, but ever so slightly. The trick is to buy them before they're completely ripe and then watch over them like a hawk. You'll still miss once in a while, but the record should be on the plus side.

Dear Dorothy: You're such a fount of information I hope you can tell me what to do with a pocket stone we found in a drawer in the garage. It's a silicon carbide "Pocket and Des Stone" and it says it may be used with thin oil or dry — and is fast cutting. Any ideas? —Doris Rigby

I'm not really the fount. I'm the intermediary for a lot of people who enjoy sharing. Anyway, this stone is an abrasive for grinding hard materials and is a cutting instrument for metals, fibers or hard rubber.

Dear Dorothy: My family loves zucchini cooked any way but they especially enjoy the following recipe. Heat half a cup of broken-up walnuts in corn oil until lightly brown, then saute a medium sliced diced onion and two to three medium or thinly sliced zucchini for about four minutes. Diabetes today

A mysterious but deadly enemy

by IRA J. LAUFER, M.D. and HERBERT KADISON

(First of a series)

If you are under the impression that diabetes is not a deadly enemy of mankind, rampant in the world and increasing in its magnitude, ponder this incontrovertible fact: diabetes is now officially the fifth leading cause of disease-related death in the United States.

At the turn of the century it ranked 27 on that grim list. Today there are also about five million people in the United States who do not even know that they are diabetic.

And perhaps, if the number of deaths from heart disease, arteriosclerotic disease, kidney failure and cerebrovascular accidents (strokes) were traced to their root causes, it would be found that many were due to complications or effects of long-term diabetes, diagnosed or undiagnosed, on the cardiovascular system and the kidneys.

SUPPORTING THIS are results of a study conducted by the Pennsylvania Health Department indicating that 300,000 diabetics die each year in the United States. Official figures list only 35,000 deaths with diabetes as the official cause.

In further corroboration, the report of the National Commission on Diabetes, published in December, 1975, stated that when diabetes and its complications are considered together, it emerges as the third leading cause of death. "Mortality statistics do not generally specify underlying or contributory cause of death, resulting in a lack of accurate information on the actual death rate from diabetes," said the report.

Physicians recognize that diabetes is a most mysterious disease and may not always act the same. It may attack without warning, with its standard symptoms — fatigue, excessive thirst, frequent urination, rapid loss of weight, high blood sugar content, itching and, sometimes, sexual impotence in males. It may also lie completely dormant, exhibiting no symptoms at all until precipitated by one of the many factors that can trigger its onset.

> When diabetes and its complications are considered together it emerges as the third leading cause of death.

IT IS NO WONDER that medical researchers and practitioners say that diabetes is an enemy not easily understood, whose variations have not yet been fathomed. The disease now exists in "have not" cultures as well as in affluent societies, when it was originally thought to be the result of high living and overindulgence in both food and drink.

Diabetes has been recognized as a disease entity since the earliest times of recorded history, and still comparatively little is known about it.

According to the national Health Interview Survey of 1965-66, the last comprehensive determination of diabetics in the United States, it was found that unsuspected diabetes is found with greater frequency among older persons, the obese and relatives of diabetics, and is 10 times more frequent after age 45.

THE NATIONAL Commission of Diabetes reported in 1975 that there were 10 million diabetics in the United States and half of them did not know they had the disease.

On the basis of figures provided by various health organizations it is now estimated that diabetes afflicts at least five per cent of the world's population. The Commission also reported that the number of people with the disease will double every 15 years.

Why is diabetes on the increase? As society becomes more affluent, as more civilizations have become affluent, more diabetes is apparent.

The disease tends to be related to stress and to urbanization. African natives who move from the bush to the cities, changing their diets, show more diabetes than previously. Other primitive people such as the Eskimos, Polynesians, Micronesians, Melanesians and the American Indians are now succumbing to diabetes in greater numbers than ever before.

DIABETES costs the United States $2 billion annually in medical care and lost time from work, according to the National Health Survey. Using even a conservative inflation rate one could assume that the 1976 cost approaches $4 billion.

Environmental and social factors play an important role in diabetes, but there is also a strong genetic tendency in the passage of the disease from one generation to the next. It is known that the relatives of diabetics are three times more apt to contract the disease than those in whose families it has not appeared. Some who possess the tendency will themselves become overt diabetics, while others will merely pass susceptibility to their offspring.

Diabetes is vastly different from other diseases because the patient is deeply involved in his own care. No other ailment so intimately involves the total metabolism as does diabetes. A patient's behavior at various stages may affect what happens 10 or 20 years later. He must understand the things that can upset his balance because the physician prescribes a regimen which will maintain the blood sugar within relatively restricted ranges, something the non-diabetic does naturally. He orders a balanced diet, medication, exercise and a calm well-ordered way of life. Maintaining the proper balance of blood sugar is really very different because of the many factors that can cause the diabetic to break out of the restricted way of life which keeps the blood sugar within acceptable limits.

THE SOONER some real progress is made toward discovering the cause of diabetes the better. At its present rate of proliferation it is possible that some time in the future diabetes will afflict everyone in the world.

At best this condition is debilitating; at its worst it causes considerable suffering and untimely death. Those with diabetes are affected over their entire lifetimes and they must modify their lifestyles to accommodate it.

There's something about wearing fur

by MARIANNE SCOTT

"Life is too short and winter's too long to go without mink" is the slogan of one European mink supplier. While mink still holds its place as the No. 1 status fur for women everywhere, the slogan could well apply to any fur.

For most women there's something indescribably exciting about being swathed in fur, and the pleasure and sense of well-being derived from wearing fur does make the long winter months a bit more bearable.

So exciting are furs that it was an international fur fashion fair that was the inaugural event earlier this month for the Expocenter in the new Apparel Mart nearing completion in Chicago.

MORE AND MORE women are convinced of the "life's too short" principle and furs are no longer found only in the closets of the well-heeled mature woman. Young working girls on tight budgets are also fur conscious these days, though they usually prefer, and can better afford, the "fun furs" that are sometimes combined with leather.

Fun furs usually do not include the more expensive let-out mink pelts which younger women consider suitable only for the "older" women. The less costly rabbit, beaver, lamb, coyote, mole, skunk or fur from any animal that does not have to be trapped is more to the liking of the younger crowd.

Fun furs also do not usually include other luxury furs such as sable, fox, fisher or nutria.

And altogether out are those on the endangered list, jaguar, cheetah, ocelot and most leopards, which are illegal to import. Anyone who owns a coat of these furs purchased before the government's Endangered Species Act went into effect must have a permit from the Illinois Department of Conservation.

READILY AVAILABLE are the big favorites, the big furs such as raccoon, blue fox and lynx, but at relatively high prices. Yet, despite the soaring prices, multiple fur wardrobes are becoming more common. Cloth coat price tags are up, too, the fur lovers counter.

Higher fur prices, up 10 to 11 per cent this year, may mean the sale of more all-purpose, smaller covers such as jackets, capes, ponchos and perhaps even stoles (the luncheon circuit "uniform" of a few years back) instead of full-length coats.

Exporting and importing of furs is big business. Furs are booming not only in the United States, but also in France, Canada, Russia and in most every country of the world. If they don't wear them, they grow them.

RUSSIA'S RECENT show in New York City featured sable, broadtail and persian lamb (karakul), and American dealers and manufacturers are fighting to have an embargo lifted on seven Russian furs — mink, muskrat, marten, fox, weasel, kolinsky and ermine — which have been barred from the U.S. since 1951.

Some of the finest long-haired lamb comes from England, British Columbia and parts of the U.S., and some of the finest mink in the world is grown right in our midwest U.S.A. Norwegian ranchers, whose home-raised dark mink is not as highly regarded as it once was, have recently purchased 4,000 breeding animals from ranches in Crystal Lake and Ingleside, Ill., and Kenosha, Wis.

Said to be making a comeback is squirrel, and it's just possible we may again be seeing a lot more beaver. Seems that in Mississippi and other southern states, the beavers have overpopulated and are damming up streams and rivers, and the fur industry has been approached to help solve the problem.

LUNARAINE mink coat with horizontally worked sleeves was one of the many touches of glamour in Thursday's Northwest Community Hospital Auxiliary's show. Donna Kunkel was runway model.

BELTED OR UNBELTED, this casual sport raccoon coat can be worn over just about every garment in a wardrobe. Dede Zwilling wore it over a pant suit in the fashion lunch attended by 700 auxiliary members and guests. This fall the auxiliary marks 20 years of service to the hospital.

ONE PROBLEM apparently being solved by the fur industry is in convincing the American male that in the past he has been discriminated against when it comes to the luxury and comfort of fur. Now, each year more and more American men are succumbing to the lure of fur. "Why should women have a corner on warmth?" they contend.

"When I wear my fur, even the parking lot attendants pay attention to me!" commented one suburban male fur owner.

The kids are into furs, too. Bonwit's has recently opened a children's department called "Grandma's Boutique" with fashions in raccoon, muskrat, karakul and rabbit. It will also fill orders for mink and other furs.

A fur coat for every kid on the block may not be the goal of the fur industry, but it must surely agree that "Grandma knows best."

Furs pictured are from Rifkin Furs, Elgin, shown at last Thursday's fashion luncheon sponsored by the auxiliary of Northwest Community Hospital. Lynx-collared pant suit came from Beatrice Dorsey, Dundee. The show was at Allgauer's.

Advice to heed in choosing fur

A fur should be a fashion you really love because you'll be wearing it for years.

Furs are durable and long-lasting, and you likely will wear your fur often. A fur can be restyled to update it, giving it even more years of wear, so it's important that your fur is one you really like.

With that in mind, David Meltzer, chairman and president of Evans Furs, has some practical tips on choosing your fur.

Look for the fur most suitable for your needs. Ask yourself if you need a fur for dress or a real "work horse" one that you can wear everyday. The most durable are raccoon, mink, muskrat, nutria, sable, fisher and fitch.

ASK YOURSELF what length will best suit your lifestyle. If you wear pants and jeans a lot or are in and out of the car often, a jacket may be the best. If you are outdoors much of the time, a full-length coat is better.

How will the fur fit into your coat wardrobe? If you already have several casual coats, you'll want a more elegant fur for dress occasions. Choose one that balances your coat collection.

To tell what fur suits your size, you need to try on the garment and look at yourself in a three-way mirror. The way a woman looks in a coat or jacket depends not only on its length but the shape of the coat. The only way to judge is to see yourself in it.

Finding what color in fur is most flattering to you means trying on a range of shades from lightest to darkest. You needn't be concerned about how a shade will go with other items in your wardrobe. A fur goes with every color, advises Meltzer.

IN DECIDING what to pay, think of a fur as an investment and remember you will be wearing it when every other item in your wardrobe is either worn out or dated. Fur can be restyled. A fully let-out mink lasts 20 years and many other durable furs that long or almost that long.

Buy your fur from a reliable retailer. His integrity is your greatest assurance of value, says Meltzer.

Look for a fully-haired garment and choose a fur for its density, that is, the hairs per square inch. Look for luster and silkiness to the touch. Check the continuity of color of the skins. The should be so well matched, the color gradations will seem continuous.

Check craftsmanship. You can look at the seams of the lining and the stitching where lining joins the furs. Seams should be straight, even and uniform.

Check the quality of fur under the arms and the underneath side of the sleeves and the collar as in center back.

Safe earrings

A dentist whose wife developed a sensitivity to nickel when she had her ears pierced licked the problem by inventing earrings made with surgical-grade stainless steel posts.

Dr. Herbert Abramawitz also developed an ear-piercing kit sold only to doctors, clinics and hospitals. Both the kits and the earrings are intended for use on or by women who are allergic to the metal, nickel, that is commonly used to harden 14-karat gold for use in jewelry. Nickel sensitivity, or contact dermatitis, can sensitize a person for life. Some become allergic to zippers, watch bands, rings and other objects containing nickel.

The earrings are available by mail from H and A Enterprises, 143-19 25th Ave., Whitestone, N.Y. 11357 (UPI)

Quakes caused by shifting 'plates'

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Randy J. Hughes, of Kingston, Ont., Canada, for his question:

WHY HAVE SO FEW EARTHQUAKES OCCURRED IN CANADA?

In Japan, China, California, Alaska, Italy and Turkey, severe and damaging earthquakes occur quite often. And, of course, we know of the recent devastating earthquake in Guatemala. But there are other parts of the world, including Canada, that seem relatively quiet. The sensitive instruments that scientists use to record earthquakes show, however, that tremors happen just about everywhere.

Only Antarctica seems to be immune. If an earthquake is relatively slight and the area is uninhabited, it goes unnoticed except by scientists monitoring the area. Only the intense shocks make the headlines or television news.

Imagine the earth covered with about 20 plates, something like the sections of a basketball only irregularly shaped. Scientists say the boundaries of these great crustal slabs are constantly interacting. Sometimes they bump or grind together; other times they plunge one beneath the other. This movement squeezes and stretches rocks at the edges.

If the force is great, the rocks may rupture and shift, causing an earthquake. These ruptures, called faults, are most often beneath the surface of the earth, although some, such as the 600-mile San Andreas Fault in California, are clearly visible.

Certain areas of the world where these plates collide have a long history of earthquake activity. The most important of these areas, or belts, are the circum-Pacific belt and the Alpide belt.

The Pacific belt begins at the southern tip of Chile, reaches up the Pacific coast of South America to Central America, where it branches into the Caribbean. It continues along the Mexican coast, through California and on up to Alaska. This section includes some of the heaviest earthquake areas.

From Alaska the belt passes through the Kurile and Aleutian Islands, stretches down to Japan, the Philippines, Indonesia, New Guinea and such South Pacific islands as the Solomon and Fiji Islands.

Andy sends a Student Globe to David DeForge, 8, of Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada, for his question:

HOW MUCH PRESSURE DO YOUR MOLARS APPLY ON FOOD WHEN CHEWING?

Our teeth do more for us than just grind up our food. Brght, clean teeth help enhance our appearance. They also help to form certain sounds so we speak clearly. However, their most important job is chewing up food properly as one of the first processes of digestion. Humans have two sets of teeth, the first set, called temporary or baby teeth, begin appearing when a person is about 6 months old. By the time a child reaches 6 years old, the permanent teeth begin to come in while the temporary set begins to fall out.

When you have all of your permanent teeth, you will have a set of 32. The first eight front teeth are called incisors. With four incisors in the upper jaw and four in the lower you can bite through an apple or a piece of steak. The teeth next to the incisors are called the canines. They help tear large pieces of food into smaller ones. The two teeth next to the canines, the bicuspids, help crush the food into still smaller pieces.

The last 12 teeth are called molars. There are three on each side in the upper and lower jaw. These chompers have a broad, strong surface to grind up the food into tiny bits. When an adult chomps down with these, he exerts a pressure of about 350 pounds per square inch.

Good 'Barefoot' job done by Masque and Staff cast

by PAT ADAM

Though it's more than 10 years old, in the hands of a capable cast "Barefoot in the Park" continues to be entertaining theater.

And capable certainly describes the Masque and Staff actors who are performing this early Neil Simon comedy at Elk Grove High School. The production opened last Friday and may be seen again this Friday and Saturday evenings.

The story of young newlyweds undergoing the pangs of post-honeymoon adjustment may be an old theme, but in the hands of Simon, it's still good for plenty of hearty laughs. Besides its witty dialog and fast pace, "Barefoot in the Park" offers some delightful and deftly drawn characters.

JAN HURLEY plays the bubbly, impetuous and still somewhat immature Corie Bratter, out on her own for the first time as the bride of a proper, slightly stuffy young lawyer, Paul Bratter, portrayed by Masque and Staff newcomer Charles Golliher. They are well paired.

Ms. Hurley is enchanting as the carefree Corie, who laments that her husband is a stuffed shirt and balks at such antics as going barefoot in the park. She is particularly good in the quarrel that sends her sobbing to their tiny bedroom and Golliher is as convincing an onstage drunk as I've seen in some time.

Veronica Zogman gives an excellent portrayal of Corie's widowed mother, who reluctantly finds herself without a child any longer and dismayed when Corie tries her skill as matchmaker.

AND, THEN of course, there's the man who seems able to play anyone, Bob Johnson, delightful as the egocentric Victor Velasco, upstairs neighbor of the newlyweds in whose company Corie's mother begins to bloom.

Though they have lesser roles, Donald McNamara is outstanding as the telephone repair man and Earl Marshall provokes laughter without saying a word as the out-of-breath delivery man.

The set for the fifth floor walk-up apartment was designed by the multitalented Johnson and deserves mention as do the excellent lighting job by Gordon Pellefrinetti and the stunning props assembled by Judy Weaver. Even with a leaky closet, a too small bedroom and no bathtub, it's a cozy lit'le apartment.

Shirley Johnson directed the production, which launches the 18th season for Masque and Staff.

'Star Trek' finds new orbit in film

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—"Star Trek," defunct for eight years as a television series, will be made into a motion picture next year.

Paramount Studios and producer Gene Roddenberry say they hope to capitalize on the enormous cult surrounding the science-fiction drama and the uncounted millions who have seen the show in reruns.

"Star Trek" conventions are held at least once a month in various parts of the country where segments of the series are run. Cultists exchange pictures of its stars. Seminars are held.

Frequently the conventions are attended by actors William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy who headed the cast.

SHATNER ALREADY has signed to replay his role as captain of the star ship Enterprise. Nimoy, who played Mr. Spock, has not come to terms with the studio, but is confident he will be back as well.

"It is just a matter of ironing out a few technical difficulties," Nimoy said.

That might be translated to mean salary considerations. "Star Trek" without Nimoy as Spock would be heresy. He expects the film to roll next March for release in about a year.

Nimoy has been indelibly identified with Spock. Wherever he goes he is addressed as Spock, asked about his pointed ears and drawn into conversation about extra-terrestrial travel and beings.

Most actors would be thoroughly sick of the "Star Trek" stigma. Nimoy revels in it and, in fact, has turned a profit on his Spock mark.

HIS BOOK, "I Am Not Spock," has enjoyed brisk sales since last February. It deals with a history of the show and his own identity problems.

"It starts with how I was cast and how the role of Spock was constructed," Nimoy said. "I wrote about how I prepared for the part, makeup, my relationship with the studio, favorite episodes and the impact it has had on my life.

"Not the least of the story is the social comment it has caused. 'Star Trek' is really an on-going story. Perhaps I should title my next book 'Maybe I am Spock.'

"If you ask me," he said, laughing, "we're involved in a sweep of destiny."

Nimoy attended ceremonies for the unveiling of NASA's space shuttle earlier this month and was thrilled by the airships name, "Enterprise" as the Air Force band played the theme from "Star Trek."

"THE SHOW was on the air originally for only three years," he said. "The total number of episodes is only 78.

"What amazes me is that the ratings were never very impressive. It was generally down in the 30s and 40s. But I've always been proud of the series and being identified as Spock.

"People expect me, as Spock, to know and feel extraordinary things. They are not altogether sure I'm not really a Vulcan. I used to hear from all kinds of astrologers and mediums who wanted to explore the occult aspects of Spock.

"Audiences want to believe in magic, and that's what 'Star Trek' is all about.

"The merchandising is still going strong. Mego Toys of New York produces doll figures of the characters along with a phaser gun, a model of the Enterprise and communicators and a computerized 'Star Trek' game. They made $12 million last year and project earnings of $20 million this year.

"Colleges are even giving credit for courses dealing with 'Star Trek.' It's a fact. And God knows how many cities are rerunning the show right now."

NIMOY'S INVOLVEMENT with the series is only a small part of his life. He toured for 18 weeks recently starring in "Sherlock Holmes."

Currently he is narrating the new adventure show, "In Search Of . . ." which is syndicated in more than 60 markets.

Each week the series presents a dramatized investigation of unexplained phenomena — The Loch Ness Monster, Voodoo, the Bermuda Triangle, Dracula, the Easter Island Massacre, Big Foot and ESP.

Nimoy will host one of NBC-TV's "The Big Event" shows and then launch a three-week lecture tour.

"I lecture on science fiction, science fact, 'Star Trek' and read some of my poetry," the actor said. He is the author of two books of poems, "You And I" and "Will I think of You."

BUT NO MATTER where he goes, at home or abroad, Leonard Nimoy is unfallingly taken for Mr. Spock, the creature from the planet Vulcan.

"I know this much," Nimoy said, " 'Star Trek' has enriched my life beyond what any police, lawyer or doctor series has done for any other actor."

Cagey play traps declarer

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

South ruffed the third spade and studied the whole play of the hand. He felt certain that West would hold the king of diamonds and his problem was to avoid the loss of a diamond, a club and his contract.

He decided to work out a way to use dummy's fourth spade to throw West in the lead and end play him.

He started to run off all his trumps. West discarded a spade on the second lead and the six of diamonds on the third lead. Meanwhile, East had been doing some thinking of his own. South was not planning to ruff anything in dummy. Hence, his hand must consist of two spades, six trumps, two diamonds and three clubs. In that case he could afford to chuck a club and dropped the queen. South played out his last two trumps.

West saw what was happening and dropped his nine and jack of diamonds to blank his king. A club and diamond were played from dummy and East let two of his baby diamonds go.

The ace and king of clubs were cashed and South was in dummy for a three-card ending. Dummy held a spade, diamond and club. West held one of each suit also, but South did not know that. As far as South could tell West might well be holding a spade and two diamonds.

South decided that he was. He led dummy's spade, chucked his club and was down one when West was able to lead a club to his partner.

Ali, Norton meet in Yankee Stadium

NEW YORK (UPI) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali ran around Central Park at four in the morning without getting mugged, then whipped his tongue into final fighting trim Monday with one more exhortation on how he will "destroy Ken Norton" in Yankee Stadium.

Three years and a million or so words after their last encounter, Ali and Norton face each other in the chill night air Tuesday for the world heavyweight championship.

More than 250 million people around the globe are expected to watch the fight "live" via closed circuit or satellite-relayed television, according to promoters.

In Chicago the fight will be seen at DePaul University's Alumni Hall, the Auditorium, Aragon, Amphitheatre, Hillside Theatre and Lincoln Village Theatre.

At Yankee Stadium, where the bout begins at about 9:30 p.m., promoters are hoping for a paid attendance of at least 40,000. That would leave almost 30,000 empty seats, but with tickets scaled from $200 down to $25 would assure a live-gate record of about $3.5 million, almost one million dollars more than the second Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney fight at Soldier Field in Chicago 49 years ago.

Ali is expected to weigh in Tuesday morning at about 220 pounds, five or six more than Norton. Both fighters are in perfect physical condition after weeks of intense training. Norton sparred 225 rounds, while Ali boxed less than 100 rounds, but in their respective positions — Norton, 31 years old and still refining his boxing skills, Ali, 34 and fighting frequently — each may have chosen the best means of preparation.

Ali, a 2-1 betting favorite, said he would go for the psychological edge right from the start by making Norton wait five minutes in the ring in the expected 55 degree weather before making his entrance. From there, Ali said he will press the fight all the way.

"I'm predictin' a knockout over Ken Norton this time," said Ali, who divided two split decisions with Norton three years ago. "I'm ready now. The first fight I was out of shape, had my jaw broken and still almost won. The second fight, my hands were hurtin', couldn't hit without pain and pulled out the decision. But now my hands are well and I'm in shape. The first five rounds he should be gone."

Norton, who has become a commercially successful actor since he became famous by breaking Ali's jaw, sees the fight taking a different course, naturally.

"It's gonna be a hectic fight," Norton said. "Ali's gonna come out punching early. He feels he's gained a bit of punching power, but he doesn't move around as much, his foot agility isn't as good. His hand speed is very good and he does punch a little better.

"So he's gonna set up more, use his hand speed and his added weight for extra punching power to try to take me out early. If that doesn't work, he's gonna bounce around a little bit, but he can't box like he used to for eventually, he has to come back down and go toe to toe. He was moving around a lot in his last fight with me and I had to go seek him out. If he's gonna be a stationary target now, I can hit him twice as much and twice as hard and I plan to punish him quite a bit."

Norton relaxed with just a few friends Monday but Ali, the irrepressible self-publicist, ran four miles in the rain in Central Park and then held a news conference later in the day to promote his new autobiographical movie, based on his book, "The Greatest."

'Young' Pirates off to fast start in girls swimming

by BOB GALLAS

Palatine, the newest entry in the Mid-Suburban League girls swimming race, grabbed an early lead in the first full week of league action and is holding down first place with a 4-0 mark.

Thanks to a quirk in scheduling, Palatine has had two more meets than second place Arlington (2-0) and Prospect (2-0).

In the Central Suburban League, Maine West sports an 0-3 record and is 0-1 in the CSL South. Sacred Heart High School girls open their schedule Thursday night at St. Viator when they'll host Palatine.

Palatine has vanquished Fremd, Elk Grove, Buffalo Grove and Forest View so far, and head coach Karen Brookwell is savoring the moment. "This is our first year in the Mid-Suburban League. For the past three years, swimming here was only a club activity," she said.

Leading Palatine is a freshman who should be grabbing plenty of headlines this season, and she's only a freshman. Liz Samoore, only 13 years old and a swimmer only since age 10, has been outstanding in the water so far this year.

In the four meets she's swum this year, Samoore has taken two individual firsts in three. Three times, her 200-yard medley relay team has taken first.

"She specializes in the breaststroke but she's an all-around girl. We can swim her anywhere," said Brookwell, who's understandably high on her star pupil. Samoore, who's father, Bruce, is head track and cross-country coach at Arlington High School, fits right in with her teammates, all but five of whom are either freshmen or sophomores.

Another pair off to a fast start is Sue Cripe and Kelly Holland of Arlington. Cripe, one of the area's premier freestylers, already owns the best area times in the 100- and 50-yard freestyle events.

In the 50, Cripe has a best time of 25.9 seconds, far under the required state meet qualifying time this year of 26.5. She's the only area girl to best the state qualifying marks in the 50 or the 100.

In the 100-yard freestyle, her time of 56.0 is tops in the area and bests the state qualifying time of 58.0.

Holland is going into her fourth year of diving for the Cards and should be one of the top divers on the state level this year. Her performance against Hersey this season, where she scored 210.40, is by far the best area diving performance of the young season.

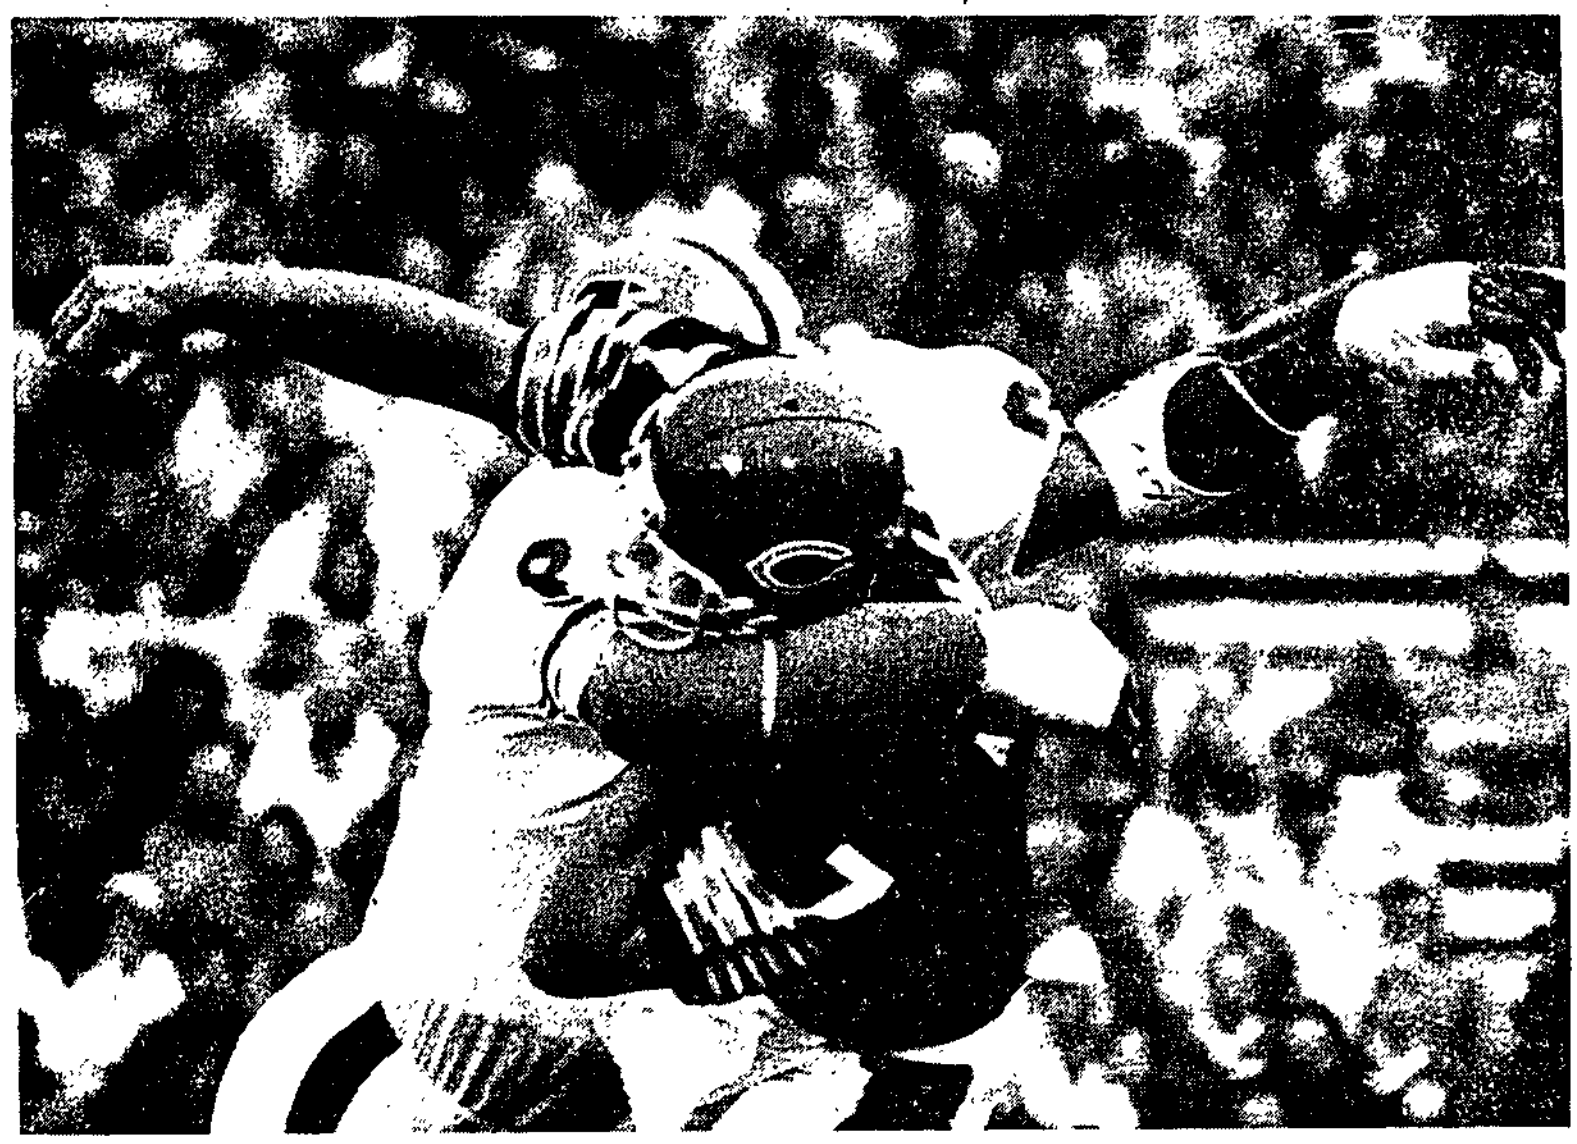

Another frosh off to a good start is Rolling Meadows' Michele Landry who owns the best area time in the 100-yard breaststroke with a 1:15.24, just ahead of Cripe with a 1:16.5.

Three teams, Elk Grove, Meadows and Hersey are tied for third place in the MSL with 1-1 records. Forest View follows with a 1-2 league mark. Buffalo Grove (0-2) and Fremd (0-3) round out the MSL standings.

Forest View's win over Fremd was the first girls swimming win in he school's history in three years of competition. But the euphoria didn't last long.

Two nights later, the Falcons fell easily to a powerful Prospect squad, 118-51. Prospect, an early favorite to repeat as conference champs, breezed by the Falcons and did it by switching around swimmers in events and swimming every girl on the Knights' roster.

Prospect has taken the MSL girls swim crown two years in a row.

Key golf bouts Tuesday for undefeated leaders

The undefeated leaders in Mid-Suburban League golf put their records on the line at the Palatine Hills and Buffalo Grove links layouts today.

Hersey will entertain unbeaten Buffalo Grove and Prospect in Tuesday's key bout. Meanwhile Palatine will welcome Forest View and Rolling Meadows while trying to protect their own unblemished MSL slate.

One of the three top clubs is bound to slip a bit in the ranks with the Knights and Bison going head-to-head.

The Huskies will be entering that match fresh from a 13th place showing of 22 teams at the 2-day, 36-hole Decatur Invitational over the weekend. Sophomore Brad Hall paced the Hersey effort with a 79-76—155 showing good for tenth place on the medalist list. Tim Rich added a 165 and Mark Miesfeldt a 166 to the cause.

The scores of all five players on each team were counted at Decatur and Joliet West emerged with top honors, edging MacArthur 779-780. Barrington fired a 795 good for third place collectively.

In another tournament conducted by Crown, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg rolled to sixth and seventh place finishes respectively while McHenry was copping the team trophy at 312.

Mundelein was second of the 20 squads gathered at 320. The Hawks, paced by Joe Husar's 81, had a 333 composite while the Saxons notched a 335 and Tom Sowin at 80 placed 11th on the medalist list.

In combat Monday Elk Grove, led by Jeff Crites at 40, polished off Conant and Wheeling while Fremd, behind Don Sullivan's 39, felled Hoffman and Arlington.

'Shell-shocked'

Illini football team loses its intensity

Loren Tate

CHAMPAIGN, ILL. — No excuses, just simple logic.

When you play a continuous string of opponents of comparable ability, you'll almost certainly fall when you bobble the football, commit unnecessary penalties and lose defensive intensity.

That's what happened to the University of Illinois — a 34-19 loser to Baylor — on a dark, misty Saturday that saw the Illini's two previous victims, Iowa and Missouri, rise up and defeat highly touted Penn State and Ohio State.

After the Bears generated just one first down in the first quarter, senior quarterback Mark Jackson confused Illinois' proud defensive unit with a series of well-timed option runs. Then, the Baylor romp was simplified in the middle quarters when Kurt Steger threw into his first two interceptions of the year and the Illini committed two disastrous fumble turnovers.

Baylor lost two fumbles also, but not until the Texans had built a 31-7 lead, allowing coach Grant Teaff to insert an entire squad of reserves with fully 9½ minutes to go.

"I'm shell-shocked," said Illini linebacker Scott Studwell, whose 13 tackles led both sides. "I don't know where our breakdowns were, but I know they weren't technical. It was our attitude. We started getting our heads down and we lost our fire.

"Both sides slipped and slid a bit, but that was no major factor. We just weren't ready mentally. We lost our intensity. The whole game turned around on us after the first quarter," he said.

What caused the turnabout? Two obvious factors: (1) key turnovers and (2) inability to contain Jackson. Illinois led 7-0 but, due to its second 15-yard penalty on a screen pass near midfield, lost field position and Baylor capitalized on its first advantageous possession.

One play later, after a Baylor TD, James Coleman lost his first fumble of the season, and the Bears had to march only 26 yards for their second score.

You never really know about a club until it faces real adversity. Behind for the first time in three games, Illinois lost contact with its game plan and the pass offense disintegrated — Steger, who completed six of his first eight, connected on four of his last 20 — and UI receivers seemed transfixed by the right secondary coverage.

Two quick turnovers at the start of the second half ended it. Behind 17-7, the Illini nearly lost an errant pitchout on the sideline, and on the next play Steger threw directly into rover Tony Green's hands. By the time Green was bumped out of bounds, the Texans had to move only 13 yards to score. Yet another bad pitch three plays later put the Bears in motion for the score that made it 31-7.

Quarterback Jackson of Baylor was a miserable 3-for-14 passing but scattered the Illini defense with his option runs and well-timed pitchouts. He netted 74 yards in 17 carries and Baylor outrushed Illinois, 272-149.

Analyzing that important statistic, winning coach Teaff said:

"I don't believe the Big Ten sees as much option football as we do in our part of the country. It takes a lot of work for a defense to learn to play against it."

Teaff went further to point ou hat "whatever the defense does is wrong if the quarterback reacts properly. The offense simply takes advantage of whatever the defense does."

On this Saturday, Jackson's timing was excellent.

A dejected Studwell of Illinois offered one last comment:

"I think we learned a lesson. We were riding pretty high. We thought we were ready mentally but we weren't."

For a different perspective and to take advantage of TV replays and comments, I watched the first half at home.

It was interesting to hear color man Lee Grosscup relate how Illinois coach Bob Blackman has changed from a "smorgasbord" offense to a greatly simplified approach, and to discuss the tremendous new "energy" on campus . . . when less than 45,000 fans turned out to see the action.

Walt Alston retires as Dodger manager

LOS ANGELES — Walter Alston, manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers for 23 years, will retire at the end of the current season, the club announced Monday.

Dodger President Peter O'Malley announced at a clubhouse news conference in Dodger Stadium that the 64-year-old Alston insisted on stepping down as manager and will be given another job in the baseball organization.

O'Malley said no decision has been reached on a successor.

Tom Lasorda, 49, a Dodger coach, has been mentioned prominently as a possible successor. Lasorda, as a minor league manager, helped develop many of the present Dodger stars and is liked and trusted by them.

There had been some sentiment in local newspapers calling for Alston's retirement because of the Dodger second-place position behind Cincinnati in the National League West.

In making his announcement ending the managerial career of the man who served longer than any other big leaguers except John McGraw of the New York Giants and Connie Mack of the old Philadelphia Athletics, O'Malley said:

"During this week we will discuss Walter's exact duties and title but the important part from our standpoint is that he will remain as a full-time member of the Dodger organization."

Bulls sign 'complete' May

Scott May, college basketball player-of-the-year for Indiana's NCAA champions, and a star on the winning U.S. Olympic team, signed a multi-year contract with the Chicago Bulls Monday and said he wants "to be known as a complete player."

"I want to play," he said. "I don't care if I start. I want to contribute, and I'll do the best I can to help.

"I try to play defense the best I can. I try to do everything the best I can, rebounding, defensive, offensive. I don't know how I'll have to change my game in the NBA, but I'll do the best I can on every part of it."

May believed that his experience in the Big Ten, which plays a "muscular game," would help him adjust to the NBA and added he expected no trouble playing a fast break offense. "Basketball is a motion game, and we did kind of the same thing at Indiana."

He refused to discuss details of his contract, although it was believed to be for more than five years and for around $1 million.

"We figure Scotty will fit right in our offense," said the Bulls' new coach, Ed Badger. "He's a shooting forward. Every college kid has to adjust to pro ball and I think Scott will take less time. He'll fit in our team defense and team offense.

Redskins tip Eagles in overtime

An interception late in a sudden-death overtime period set up a 29-yard field goal by Mark Mosley and gave the Washington Redskins a 20-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles in a nationally televised NFL game Monday night.

Philadelphia quarterback Mike Boryla hurled a 41-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Charlie Smith with 1:07 left as the Eagles tied the Redskins at 17 and forced the overtime period.

The upset-minded Eagles had a 10-3 lead with only 12 seconds left before intermission when rookie Herb Lusk fumbled after being hit by defensive tackle Dave Butz and Redskin linebacker Brad Dusek galloped 32 yards for the tying touchdown.

The Redskins had scored 53 seconds earlier when Mark Mosely kicked a 27-yard field goal that was set up by a 53-yard kickoff return by Eddie Brown and a 16-yard scamper with a fake field goal attempt by reserve quarterback Joe Theismann.

The field goal came on the first series of plays after Art Malone burst 16 yards up the middle for a touchdown that gave the Eagles, a seven-point underdog in the game, a 10-0 lead.

The Eagles' first score, a 22-yard field goal by Horst Muhlmann in the first quarter, came after Bill Bradley intercepted a pass by the Redskins' Billy Kilmer and returned it 11 yards to the Washington 41.

The Eagles were only 4-10 last year but that included two upset wins over the Redskins. The victories helped knock Washington from the NFL's post-season playoffs for the first time since 1971.

Texas' Lucchesi suspended 3 days

ARLINGTON, Tex. — The Texas Rangers announced Monday American League president Lee MacPhail had suspended manager Frank Lucchesi for three days for his part in a heated argument earlier this month with umpire Rich Garcia.

Lucchesi will miss the Rangers' final road series of the year with Minnesota this week and will resume managing the Rangers Friday night when they open a final home stand against the White Sox.

Garcia ejected Lucchesi from a game Sept. 14 in Arlington after the Rangers manager had argued loudly from the dugout over a pitch he thought should have been called a strike.

After the game Lucchesi said he wanted to meet with MacPhail to discuss Garcia because he thought Garcia was prejudiced toward him.

"I don't know why he is prejudiced, but he is," said Lucchesi.

Since then, however, Lucchesi has canceled his meeting with MacPhail.

Texas third base coach Jackie Moore will manage the club during Lucchesi's absence.

Phillies' 60,000 playoff seats sold

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Phillies announced today all tickets have been sold for their Oct. 9-10 National League playoff games with the Cincinnati Reds to be at Veterans Stadium.

Philadelphia Vice President Bill Giles said the seating capacity for the playoffs will be just over 60,000, including specially installed extra seats, 3,000 standing room tickets and seats available behind the left field scoreboard, which will be removed.

The Phillies will host the first two games of the five-game series. The third game will be played in Cincinnati as will the fourth and fifth games if they are necessary.

There were few demonstrations in the streets or horn honking after the Phillies defeated the Expos, 4-1, at Montreal Sunday to win the National League East title and the right to face the Cincinnati Reds in the playoffs.

It was the first title for the Phillies since 1950 when they won the National League pennant but lost the World Series to the New York Yankees in four straight games.

Pacers' Billy Keller calls it quits

INDIANAPOLIS — Billy Keller, a 5-foot-10 guard who many experts said never would make it in professional basketball, retired Monday after seven years with the Indiana Pacers.

Keller, 29, said he was quitting because tendonitis in his left knee had not responded to treatment enough to allow him to play with the versatility needed for the National Basketball Association.

He became the second former Purdue star to drop from the Pacers' pre-season picture in less than a week entering their first season as an NBA franchise. Rick Mount left camp last Friday, saying he had lost desire to play basketball.

Mount and Keller were teammates for a season with the Boilermakers.

Like Mount, Keller was a native Hoosier and both won the coveted "Mr. Basketball" honors while standouts in Indiana high school basketball.

In seven years in the pros Keller played on three American Basketball Association championship teams with Indiana and averaged 11.9 points in 651 games.

Vikings top Bison, 10-0, in soccer

Area powerhouse Fremd ripped Buffalo Grove nets for seven first-half goals and went on to defeat the Bison 10-0 in a Mid-Suburban soccer confrontation on the Viking field Monday night.

Jerry Norys led the barage, slamming home three shots during the opening two stanzas. His brother, Steve, added two more points to the Viking cause.

Rich Garcia also contributed a pair of goals. Other scores were served up by Mike Mitsch, Kurt Blechner and Paul Cornwall.

Meanwhile Bob Kapko came on later in the contest to spell Eric Hartman in the nets and preserve the shutout for Fremd.

The triumph lifted the Viking slate for the season to 4-0-1. Fremd's frosh-soph unit also won impressively Monday, trimming Buffalo Grove 5-1. It was their fifth victory against no losses this fall.

Carter will join Baum each Monday morning at 8:15 to discuss the NFL action. In addition, Carter will also provide Chicago area radio listeners with first-hand information on the Chicago Bears.

The Dave Baum Morning Show is heard from 5:30 until 10:00 a.m. Monday through Friday on WIND Radio. The Dave Baum Show is a mixture of music, talk, and information services, including news with Jim Gannon, Earl Finckle weather reports, and Jim Burham sports.

Ex-Mustangs as Wildcats

ON OFFENSE. Northwestern sophomore reserve quarterback Steve Breitbeil begins a 47-yard pass play to split end Rob Deen Saturday. Although Notre Dame blanked the Wildcats, 48-0, the rout gave the former Rolling Meadows prep star a chance to show off his throwing arm . . .

. . . ON DEFENSE. Wildcat senior defensive end Bill Geegan guards against an Irish reverse. Geegan, also a Meadows Mustang grad, and Breitbeil are two of seven Herald area players on Northwestern's varsity team.

Time out for a snack

Most blue herons have migrated south for the winter season, but one straggler decided to eat a hearty meal in the Des Plaines River near Wheeling before making the trip.

Like a boxer feinting jabs with his opponent, the blue heron stuck his long neck in the shallow water, gulping down a catch of fish every minute or two.

Free bus rides for seniors to start in 3 weeks

A program that would allow Des Plaines' senior citizens to ride free on intracity buses should be in operation in about three weeks, an alderman said Monday.

Ald. George Olen, 2nd, chairman of the city's special transportation committee, said he expects the city council to adopt an ordinance Monday that will subsidize bus rides for senior citizens 65 or older.

"After the ordinance is passed, all the city will have to do is issue cards to the senior citizens that will enable them to ride free," he said. "I would guess that it should all be done in about three weeks."

The fare on intracity buses is 45 cents, with senior citizens and handicapped persons paying only half fare. The Regional Transportation Authority, however, is expected to lower fares to 30 cents effective Oct 17.

UNDER THE PROGRAM being considered by the city council, the city would provide a 15-cent-per-ride subsidy for senior citizens with the RTA paying the remainder. The subsidy will have no limit.

Olen said the city's senior citizens will not have to wait until the fares are lowered to ride free because the North Suburban Mass Transit District, which operates the intracity bus system, has agreed to absorb the loss.

"NORTRAN has said they will honor the senior citizen bus cards immediately," he said.

Mayor Charles J. Bolek made the proposal to subsidize bus rides, saying it would take some of the strain off the city's subsidized taxicab program for the elderly.

Under the taxi program, senior citizens may ride cabs to any part of the city for 50 cents between 9 a.m. and 11 p.m. and for $1 at all other times. The remainder of the $1.50 rate is paid by the city.

"I think what I have proposed would benefit senior citizens as well as the city," he said. "They wouldn't have to pay anything and the city would save money because the bus fares are less than what is now paid for each individual taxi ride."

City officials in recent months have been considering ways to hold down the cost of the senior citizen taxi program, which has mushroomed from $15,000 in 1973 to an expected $36,000 this year.

OFFICIALS HAVE said subsidizing bus fares for the elderly not only would keep down the cost of the taxi program, but also would help bolster sagging ridership on the intracity bus system.

The bus system needs 6,000 riders a week to break even, but has only 1,000 to 1,100.

The intracity bus system consists of south, north, west and southwest routes, which are designed to bring bus service within six blocks of most homes in Des Plaines. The buses operate Monday through Saturday from 6 a.m. to abut 6 p.m.

RTA officials said they will consider eliminating the north and southwest routes unless ridership improves.

Chinese leaders urge crackdown on disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

They'll fly you almost anywhere

The sky's the limit for these taxis

by DIANE MERMIGAS

It's no ordinary flight service that shuttles around politicians and entertainers one minute and scatters the ashes of the dead across the countryside the next.

The charter pilots at Pal-Waukee Airport, Palatine Road and Milwaukee Avenue, after all, is anything but an ordinary transportation service — one that is often used by the public for the oddest jobs.

The dozen or so pilots work around the clock running errands to every part of the country, delivering people and cargo to farflung destinations.

"We really fill a void in the business by helping companies or individuals who need to get somewhere fast but don't want to take a regular airline flight and don't have their own private planes," said Charles Priester, head of the charter division, and co-owner and operator of the airport with his father, George.

THE AVERAGE OF 10 charters a day and 75 a week seldom leaves the division's three Lear jets and eight propeller planes idle.

One pilot might leave before dawn to fly a local corporate head to New York for a breakfast meeting and then return him for lunch in Chicago.

Another pilot might take off with a political candidate for a week-long airport-hopping campaign downstate or take on the dubious distinction of chauffeuring entertainers such as Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds around the Midwest for a concert tour.

No two requests are alike and one never knows how a job will go since the pilot has the mechanical complexities of the plane, the temperamental whims of Mother Nature and the uncanny reactions of his passengers to deal with, Priester said.

"Once I was scheduled to fly a businessman to Houston for the day. I didn't get back here until almost a month later. He paid me to fly him from one coast to the other and even into Mexico for other business. We saw everything," he said.

NOTABLES, SUCH AS Bill Cosby, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Gov. Richard Ogilvie have been passengers in Priester's plane during the 21 years he has been flying.

Entertainers and politicians usually sit quietly preoccupied while the pilot takes care of things up front, Priester said.

"It's a thrill to meet and fly people like that. But it's always the ordinary, everyday types who leave me with something to think about," he said.

The hourly rates of $610 to charter a Lear jet and $80 to hire a prop plane and pilot doesn't deter people from using time in the air for whatever they like.

One fanciful young man picked a plane ride over Lake Michigan to propose to his girlfriend who cried throughout the return trip, Priester said.

ONE ELDERLY MAN, taking his first air trip sat rigid and silent, his sweaty palms over his eyes, during a two-hour trip to New York and then got off the plane raving about the flight.

As in any business, things don't always go as planned. Freight has been delivered to the wrong location and

Dist. 63 to mull lunch program

The progress of the new lunch program will be discussed tonight by the East Maine Dist. 63 Board of Education.

The board changed its lunch policy in 1975 following reports by Supt. G. Allan Gogo that overcrowding was creating health and safety hazards during lunch periods in the district's nine elementary schools.

A report tonight will contain information on how many students were eating lunch in district schools as of Sept. 17, Gogo said. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Apollo School, 10100 Dee Rd., Maine Township.

IN MAY 1975 THE board adopted a lunch policy which designated children in grades 1-4 with working parents as the first group which would be allowed to remain in their schools for lunch.

Other children would be allowed to stay in the following priority:

- 11 remaining students in grades 1-4.
- Students in grades 5-6 with work-

$10,000 cardboard tennis match

Riggs accepts bait, he'll show up

In Las Vegas sometime in November, tennis hustler Bobby Riggs and an Elk Grove Village firm's resident hustler will meet in a cardboard court tennis match for $10,000.

To promote its new board game called "15 Love," the House of Games, 2633 Greenleaf Ave., last July challenged Riggs to a $10,000 winner-take-all match. The firm will be represented by Biggs Calderhead, a member of the company's Canadian staff who helped design the game and who is featured on its cover.

After a few months of negotiations, company president Jack Hirsch said Riggs accepted a modified challenge. "Enough of your Canadian capers," Riggs says in his letter to Calderhead. "I will teach you the lesson of your life about what tennis is all about."

TERMS OF THE match are not complete, but Riggs will be guaranteed $5,000 if he loses or ties — the standard fee for a Riggs' appearance since his nationally televised loss to pro Billie Jean King in straight sets. He will get $10,000 if he wins.

Whether their champion, Calderhead, wins or loses, the game firm will donate copies of the game to veterans' hospitals in the Los Angeles area, Hirsch said. "If Riggs loses, we'll be able to afford giving a few more away," Hirsch said.

"We're still drawing up the regulations for the match, but it probably will be a best of seven games," Hirsch said.

Famed odds-maker Jimmy the Greek is being asked to serve as scorekeeper and set the prematch odds.

HIRSCH SAID there is "an outside chance" the match might be televised. He has contacted Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, the "Dinah Shore Show" and Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" about the match.

Previous House of Games' promotions have included sending copies of its "Project CIA" game to several officials in Washington, D.C. including then CIA Director William Colby, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and President Ford. The company also has furnished area libraries with free copies of its games.

even the wrong passengers have been flown on a trip due to communications mix-ups, he said.

Requests such as the one to scatter the ashes of someone who has been cremated to the four winds, "don't happen very often, but they do happen," Priester said.

Although the hours and work are irregular, Joe Leardi has been flying charters out of Pal-Waukee for 28 years.

"It's a good job and interesting work. I have always liked flying and there is something different you run up against everyday," he said.

FOR LEARDI, THAT has meant making an emergency landing in an alfalfa field, having his plane for the Rolling Stones rock group mobbed by overly enthusiastic fans, transporting patients to the hospital, taking aerial photographs for land planners, and delivering medical assistance to flood-ravaged areas.

"You might say we are like taxis or minutemen in the sky. But, after a while the requests don't particularly strike you," he said.

"It's all in a day's work."

Children who wish to stay are required to eat lunch at their schools every day of the school week, Gogo said.

The board adopted the lunch policy following a nearly six-month review of previous policy which only allowed students to remain at school for lunch if they lived more than seven-tenths of a mile from school or had two working parents.

Union official blasts policy on police pay talks

A Wheeling police union official Monday told village board members that police officers "cannot participate" in negotiations under the village's recently adopted collective bargaining guidelines.

Lawrence Parks, the official, said negotiating under the terms of the collective bargaining policy "would be no more than begging." Parks is president of the Wheeling chapter of the Combined Counties Police Assn.

Parks said the policy "is an attempt to circumvent the issues and to abridge the rights of the employes to free representation

"WHILE IT MAY be an attempt to take a step in the right direction or a compromise, its text is dictatorial as it relates to the rights of the employes " he said.

The collective bargaining policy approved earlier this year by the village board prohibits outside collective bargaining units from representing employes in salary negotiations

Members of the police and fire departments have been seeking board recognition for the police union as their bargaining agent. The village board had repeatedly denied the request

Parks said he has been a village employe since December 1969 and participated in the 1970 police strike.

"I clearly remember when the attitude and morale were at an extreme high on the Wheeling Police Dept and I am now working when the attitude and morale are at an all-time low," he said

PARKS SAID that he has witnessed "village boards and village managers attempt to settle employe problems with reference to budget negotiations in back rooms, restaurants and at lawn parties, but never with any employe or employe representatives present," he said

"We now have another attempt by a village board to ignore its moral responsibility to its employes in the area of meaningful, open negotiations," he said

Village Mgr. Terry L Zerkle has said that the village will negotiate with employes but said they must first ask for recognition of a bargaining unit made up only of village employes

Hoogasian hits Lake County plan

Firm for code overhaul 'illegal'

A plan to hire a private firm to overhaul Lake County's zoning ordinance has been called "illegal" by Lake County State's Atty. Jack Hoogasian.

The county planning, zoning and building committee had planned to hire a private law firm at a cost of $7,000 to supply legal assistance in researching zoning revisions.

Hoogasian, in a memorandum to the committee, said hiring the private firm would be illegal and a waste of money.

"I AM SHOCKED that you are contemplating spending the taxpayer's money to contract for legal services which can and will be provided by this office," the Hoogasian memorandum said.

"I consider it a slap in the face to my able assistants assigned to provide your committee with legal assistance," Hoogasian added.

Hoogasian cited opinions from the Illinois Attorney General's Office that the state's attorney is to be the legal counsel for the county board and the board cannot hire private attorneys.

Committee chairman F.T. "Mike" Graham said the planning, zoning and building committee did not have confidence in the state's attorney's office.

"THE COMMITTEE'S experience with the state's attorney's office is not one of confidence," Graham said.

"When we are challenged in court on the new zoning ordinance, we want to be on the best ground possible," Graham added.

The majority of the committee favored an outside legal review of the ordinance overhaul, Graham said.

Graham accused Hoogasian of seeking publicity for his reelection campaign.

"He says in other committees that he doesn't have the staff or time to give us legal advice, and we wait for months for an opinion. They claim they have enough staff to give us 100 per cent on this," Graham said.

THE COMMITTEE is embarking on a two-year project to overhaul the county zoning ordinance. Graham said the work is an opportunity to control growth in the county.

"We want to get into an area of innovative ideas on zoning and good solid controls on growth," Graham said. "I believe if we carry through we can put planning back in the hands of public officials and out o the hands of private interests and developing groups," Graham said

Lane Kending, Lake County Regional Planning Commission director, said that innovative zoninz ideas from several parts of the country would be studied in the zoning ordinance project, including Bucks County, Pa., where Kendig was a planning official before coming to Lake County.

"It's a little too early to predict what will come out of it. We would like to survey everything going on in a variety of places around the country," Kendig said

The committee will be making zoning ordinance proposals after July 1, Kendig said. The zoning ordinance project is federally funded.

Kendig said his department was working with the state's attorney's office to work out the problem.

"I don't think there was any intent to create a problem. If the state's attorney's office has the expertise, we will work with them," Kendig said.

Man indicted in fraud plot against church federation

A Buffalo Grove man was indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury Monday for allegedly defrauding the Church Federation of Greater Chicago of more than $60,000.

Steven J. Miller, 265 Belaire Ct., was former finance chairman of the federation.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Miller, 31, a stockbroker, was charged with three counts of theft and securities law violations.

Miller served as the volunteer finance committee chairman of the federation for about a year beginning in 1974, Scott said. The alleged offfenses took place between January and August of 1975, he said.

Scott said Miller is accused of misappropriating a $60,444.28 commercial note by depositing it in the bank account of a Skokie apartment complex in which Miller has a major interest.

Miller allegedly supplied the federation with false brokerage house receipts that showed the money was being reinvested for the federation, Scott said.

Miller was unavailable for comment Monday night.

$75 for non-villagers

42% pay ambulance fee: Markus

About 42 per cent of nonvillage residents using the Wheeling Fire Department's ambulance service from May 1 through Sept. 7 have paid the required fee, Assistant Village Mgr. Thomas Markus said. He said, however, the collection rate is good.

Markus said 42.4 per cent of the nonvillage residents served in the four months have paid the $75 ambulance charge. He said the percentage of collection will rise because nonvillage residents have three months from the time they received Wheeling ambulance service to pay the bill. Markus said many nonvillage residents served near the end of the period have not paid but are expected to. Village residents are not charged for the service.

"Some of the people who used the service towards September haven't had a chance to pay. So far, we've had a fairly good success rate," he said.

MARKUS SAID 92 or 17.2 per cent of the 534 ambulance calls during the period were to non-residents. He said the village has received a total of $2,925 in ambulance fees.

"Most of the people have paid within the three-month period. We haven't had many problems except for a few people on welfare, but we found one agency or another that would come up with the payment," he said.

Markus said the success in collecting the fee is due to the supervision of Bobbie Krause, deputy village clerk.

The village board in April approved the $75 fee for ambulance service outside the village after trustees learned that annually 31 per cent of all ambulance runs were to nonresidents.

THE VILLAGE pays for paramedic and ambulance services out of general tax revenues collected from Wheeling residents, and officials wanted to supplement the funds with a service fee.

The fee is charged only to persons living outside the village but within the boundaries of the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection Dist. Wheeling is part of the fire protection district, and the village fire department serves unincorporated areas near the village.

Village officials have said the fire department will provide emergency service to unincorporated areas regardless of residents' ability to pay.

$10,000 cardboard tennis match

Riggs accepts bait, he'll show up

In Las Vegas sometime in November, tennis hustler Bobby Riggs and an Elk Grove Village firm's resident hustler will meet in a cardboard court tennis match for $10,000.

To promote its new board game called "15 Love," the House of Games, 2633 Greenleaf Ave., last July challenged Riggs to a $10,000 winner-take-all match. The firm will be represented by Biggs Calderhead, a member of the company's Canadian staff who helped design the game and who is featured on its cover.

After a few months of negotiations, company president Jack Hirsch said Riggs accepted a modified challenge. "Enough of your Canadian capers," Riggs says in his letter to Calderhead. "I will teach you the lesson of your life about what tennis is all about."

TERMS OF THE match are not complete, but Riggs will be guaranteed $5,000 if he loses or ties — the standard fee for a Riggs' appearance since his nationally televised loss to pro Billie Jean King in straight sets. He will get $10,000 if he wins.

Whether their champion, Calderhead, wins or loses, the game firm will donate copies of the game to veterans' hospitals in the Los Angeles area, Hirsch said. "If Riggs loses, we'll be able to afford giving a few more away," Hirsch said.

"We're still drawing up the regulations for the match, but it probably will be a best of seven games," Hirsch said.

Famed odds-maker Jimmy the Greek is being asked to serve as scorekeeper and set the prematch odds.

HIRSCH SAID there is "an outside chance" the match might be televised. He has contacted Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, the "Dinah Shore Show" and Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" about the match.

Previous House of Games' promotions have included sending copies of its "Project CIA" game to several officials in Washington, D.C. including then CIA Director William Colby, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and President Ford. The company also has furnished area libraries with free copies of its games.

Schnell named to head township youth panel

Richard R. Schnell, Arlington Heights, has been appointed chairman of the Wheeling Township Committee on Youth.

Township Supervisor Ethel Kolerus also appointed Michael Teta, Buffalo Grove, secretary of the youth committee.

Schnell is assistant principal of instructional services at Buffalo Grove High School, and has been a member of the youth committee for three years. He replaces William J. Heffernan as chairman.

Teta is a systems programmer for an insurance company in Northbrook. He replaces Raymond Johnson as secretary. Both Heffernan and Johnson will remain on the youth committee.

The Wheeling Township Committee on Youth provides information on youth services in the township. It is reponsible for coordinating and helping to fund youth service agencies in Wheeling Township. The committee also works with the state, Cook County and municipalities in Wheeling Township on matters concerning youth services.

Woman gets probation for sprinkling violation

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lusi Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedram faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

Vandalism law gains unanimous OK of trustees

An ordinance holding parents responsible for acts of vandalism committed by their 11- to 19-year-old children was adopted Monday night by the Buffalo Grove Village Board

The board unanimously approved the ordinance, which subjects parents to a possible $500 fine for each violation Village attorneys said it was not known if the parents also will be liable for damages under the ordinance

Village Atty. Richard Raysa said a similar law has been in effect in other Illinois communities since 1969, but has not yet been challenged in court.

There was no opposition from board members or village residents. Similar proposals have met with strong opposition in other Northwest suburban communities. A similar ordinance was adopted three weeks ago in Arlington Heights, and another is being considered by the Mount Prospect Village Board.

"WE WILL HAVE AN effective course of action to pursue (in vandalism cases) whereas now we have none," said Police Chief Harry Walsh.

"I don't expect there will be mass arrests for this violation in this community or any other," he said.

Walsh said the ordinance would have a "halo" effect on parents.

"Parents who are threatened by monetary loss might be a little more concerned with what their kids are dling at 9, 10 or 11 o'clock at night," he said

Attorney William Raysa, son of Village Atty. Richard Raysa, said if the ordinance is tested in court, some provision may be found illegal. One state statute, for example, says a child under 13 cannot be found guilty of a crime, he said.

The ordinance does not hold parents criminally at fault as does a similar ordinance adopted in Deerfield. The Buffalo Grove ordinance is based on a law adopted in Northbrook.

Penalties also include possible probation of up to one year for a child A court also could sentence a child to attend special classes and undergo medical or psychiatric treatment.

The ordinance will be effective in about 10 days.

Chinese leaders seek to halt civil disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

Grand jury indicts broker in fraud case

A Buffalo Grove man was indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury Monday for allegedly defrauding the Church Federation of Greater Chicago of more than $60,000.

Miller was unavailable for comment Monday night.

Hoogasian hits Lake County plan

Firm for code overhaul 'illegal'

A plan to hire a private firm to overhaul Lake County's zoning ordinance has been called "illegal" by Lake County State's Atty. Jack Hoogasian.

The county planning, zoning and building committee had planned to hire a private law firm at a cost of $7,900 to supply legal assistance in researching zoning revisions.

Hoogasian, in a memorandum to the committee, said hiring the private firm would be illegal and a waste of money.

"I AM SHOCKED that you are contemplating spending the taxpayer's money to contract for legal services which can and will be provided by this office," the Hoogasian memorandum said.

"I consider it a slap in the face to my able assistants assigned to provide your committee with legal assistance," Hoogasian added.

Hoogasian cited opinions from the Illinois Attorney General's Office that the state's attorney is to be the legal counsel for the county board and the board cannot hire private attorneys.

Sky's the limit for these taxi drivers

by DIANE MERMIGAS

It's no ordinary flight service that shuttles around politicians and entertainers one minute and scatters the ashes of the dead across the countryside the next.

The charter pilots at Pal-Waukee Airport, Palatine Road and Milwaukee Avenue, after all, is anything but an ordinary transportation service — one that is often used by the public for the oddest jobs.

The dozen or so pilots work around the clock running errands to every part of the country, delivering people and cargo to farflung destinations.

"We really fill a void in the business by helping companies or individuals who need to get somewhere fast but don't want to take a regular airline flight and don't have their own private planes," said Charles Priester, head of the charter division, and co-owner and operator of the airport with his father, George.

THE AVERAGE OF 10 charters a day and 75 a week seldom leaves the division's three Lear jets and eight propeller planes idle.

One pilot might leave before dawn to fly a local corporate head to New York for a breakfast meeting and then return him for lunch in Chicago.

Another pilot might take off with a political candidate for a week-long airport-hopping campaign downstate or take on the dubious distinction of chauffeuring entertainers such as Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds around the Midwest for a concert tour.

No two requests are alike and one never knows how a job will go since the pilot has the mechanical complexities of the plane, the temperamental whims of Mother Nature and the uncanny reactions of his passengers to deal with, Priester said.

"Once I was scheduled to fly a businessman to Houston for the day. I didn't get back here until almost a month later. He paid me to fly him from one coast to the other and even into Mexico for other business. We saw everything," he said.

NOTABLES SUCH AS Bill Cosby, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Gov. Richard Ogilvie have been passengers in Priester's plane during the 21 years he has been flying.

Entertainers and politicians usually sit quietly preoccupied while the pilot takes care of things up front, Priester

CHARLES PRIESTER checks a map in front of his Lear jet which he uses in a charter business based at Pal-Waukee Airport, Prospect Heights. Priester and other charter pilots transport both passengers and cargo to various destinations.

They'll fly you almost anywhere

The sky's the limit for these taxis

said.

"It's a thrill to meet and fly people like that. But it's always the ordinary, everyday types who leave me with something to think about," he said.

The hourly rates of $610 to charter a Lear jet and $80 to hire a prop plane and pilot doesn't deter people from using time in the air for whatever they like.

One fanciful young man picked a plane ride over Lake Michigan to propose to his girlfriend who cried throughout the return trip, Priester said.

ONE ELDERLY MAN, taking his first air trip sat rigid and silent, his sweaty palms over his eyes, during a two-hour trip to New York and then got off the plane raving about the flight.

As in any business, things don't always go as planned. Freight has been delivered to the wrong location and even the wrong passengers have been flown on a trip due to communications mix-ups, he said.

Requests such as the one to scatter the ashes of someone who has been cremated to the four winds, "don't happen very often, but they do happen," Priester said.

Although the hours and work are irregular, Joe Leardi has been flying charters out of Pal-Waukee for 28 years.

"It's a good job and interesting work. I have always liked flying and there is something different you run up against everyday," he said.

FOR LEARDI, THAT has meant making an emergency landing in an alfalfa field, having his plane for the Rolling Stones rock group mobbed by overly enthusiastic fans, transporting patients to the hospital, taking aerial photographs for land planners, and delivering medical assistance to flood-ravaged areas.

"You might say we are like taxis or minutemen in the sky. But, after a while the requests don't particularly strike you," he said.

"It's all in a day's work."

Can't stop eating 'em.

A watchful wader.

Time out for a snack

Most blue herons have migrated south for the winter season, but one straggler decided to eat a hearty meal in the Des Plaines River near Wheeling before making the trip.

Like a boxer feinting jabs with his opponent, the blue heron stuck his long neck in the shallow water, gulping down a catch of fish every minute or two.

$6 million cost seen for Lake Michigan water

If Elk Grove Village were to obtain Lake Michigan water by itself, it would have to spend an estimated $6.1 million during the next five years, Village Mgr. Charles Willis said.

Willis estimates the village would have to spend $2,979,000 in water system improvemements, plus another $2,294,000 for facilities to bring water from Chicago to Elk Grove Village. The remainder would be in legal, engineering and contingency fees.

"Preliminary estimates suggest our costs wold be less it other cities were in the program," Willis said.

Eight Northwest suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, belong to SHARE + 3, a coalition trying to obtain Lake Michigan water. Willis, said, however, it is premature to project the involvement of other SHARE + 3 members.

THE ELK GROVE village cost estimate was drawn up so that the village can begin generating funds — partially through proposed water rate increases — and be able to begin construction as soon as it receives a lake water allocation. The lack of an allocation has prevented Chicago from selling lake water to the village.

Willis said internal water system improvements are needed because the system is designed to handle and distribute water from several wells rather than from a single source.

In a multiple-source water system, assistant village engineer Pete Kaleta said, the transmission pipes all can be the same pipe. When the water comes from a single source, however, it must flow through pipes of gradually decreasing size to maintain pressure.

The village's transmission lines now are 12 inches in diameter, but some would have to be replaced with 36-inch pipes if the village obtains Lake Michigan water on its own, Kaleta said.

THE VILLAGE also would have to construct pumping stations and storage tanks.

Two sites are under consideration for the additional water storage. One is five of the 36 acres the village owns at the northeast corner of Landmeier and Busse roads. Once proposed for a sports arena, 31 acres of the site have been put up for sale by the village.

The second potential water storage site is land immediately west of the planned Meacham Road fire station, off the Biesterfield road extension.

Willis' estimate of the cost of Lake Michigan water does not include any money for additional facilities at the lake possibly needed to obtain adequate amounts of water.

Chinese leaders urge crackdown on disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

$10,000 cardboard tennis match

Riggs accepts bait, he'll show up

In Las Vegas sometime in November, tennis hustler Bobby Riggs and an Elk Grove Village firm's resident hustler will meet in a cardboard court tennis match for $10,000.

To promote its new board game called "15 Love," the House of Games, 2633 Greenleaf Ave., last July challenged Riggs to a $10,000 winner-take-all match. The firm will be represented by Biggs Calderhead, a member of the company's Canadian staff who helped design the game and who is featured on its cover.

After a few months of negotiations, company president Jack Hirsch said Riggs accepted a modified challenge. "Enough of your Canadian capers," Riggs says in his letter to Calderhead. "I will teach you the lesson of your life about what tennis is all about."

TERMS OF THE match are not complete, but Riggs will be guaranteed $5,000 if he loses or ties — the standard fee for a Riggs' appearance since his nationally televised loss to pro Billie Jean King in straight sets. He will get $10,000 if he wins.

Whether their champion, Calderhead, wins or loses, the game firm will donate copies of the game to veterans' hospitals in the Los Angeles area, Hirsch said. "If Riggs loses, we'll be able to afford giving a few more away," Hirsch said.

"We're still drawing up the regulations for the match, but it probably will be a best of seven games," Hirsch said.

Famed odds-maker Jimmy the Greek is being asked to serve as scorekeeper and set the prematch odds.

HIRSCH SAID there is "an outside chance" the match might be televised. He has contacted Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, the "Dinah Shore Show" and Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" about the match.

Previous House of Games' promotions have included sending copies of its "Project CIA" game to several officials in Washington, D.C. including then CIA Director William Colby, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and President Ford. The company also has furnished area libraries with free copies of its games.

Heart ailment hospitalizes Trustee George Spees, 43

Elk Grove Village Trustee George T. Spees, 43, was in good condition Monday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, apparently suffering from a heart ailment.

Spees, 140 Crest Ave., was admitted to the hospital's coronary-care unit Friday for observation and tests, after experiencing chest pains earlier that morning, village officials said.

A hospital spokesman said Spees was in good condition Monday and was being transferred to a regular hospital room.

Allow flexibility in teaching

'Open' schools still stress basics

by HOLLY HANSON

The traditional tunnel-like hallways are gone; so are the tile floors. The series of classrooms with cinderblock walls also are missing.

Instead, Nerge School, 660 Woodfield Terrace, Roselle, and Enders-Salk School, 345 N. Salem Dr., Schaumburg, are laden with open space, wall-to-wall carpeting and a minimum of stationary walls.

The two new schools bear only a faint resemblance to more conventional schools, but after some apprehension by staff, administrators and students, everyone seems to be adjusting to the ultra-modern building.

THE BUILDINGS, designed by architect Guy Fishman, are similar, "except ours has steps up to the front door," Nerge Principal Frank Tavano said.

Because the children attending the new schools were accustomed to traditional classrooms, there was fear they would not be able to concentrate in an open environment.

Enders-Salk Principal Roy Broderson said these fears were unfounded. Children and teachers have become "extremely comfortable" with the system, he said.

"I think the only problem that existed was a fear on the total staff's part on what it's going to be like teaching in an open environment," he said. "Experience has been the best cure."

THE OPEN environment does not allow children to run chaotically through the building. Instead, it makes the traditional arrangement more flexible, allowing groups of children to combine for some lessons and separate for others.

Both schools have some traditional classrooms with four permanent walls. Most of the classrooms, however, have only one permanent wall.

Two sides of the room are hinged panels which can be folded back to combine classrooms. The fourth side of the room is completely open. This side faces the hallway, and unless teachers in adjoining rooms fold back the flexible walls, classrooms remain separated.

About 600 children attend Enders-Salk while Nerge has about 500 students. Many of the children came from the traditional classrooms of Blackhawk and Schaumburg schools, two of the district's older buildings.

THE CHILDREN HAVE adjusted to Enders-Salk, Broderson said, largely through the efforts of their teachers, who have stressed the need for quiet. "The open physical plant hasn't hurt (the children)," he said.

At Nerge, children were given a tour of the building before school began. Discipline and safety were stressed at the orientation, Tavano said, and the children are quiet and orderly in the building. Doubting parents who tour the school "like it when they see it," he said.

Each school's kindergarten room is large enough for two classes and can be divided by a folding flexible wall. The room is carpeted, but a tile rim surrounds the room allowing for easy cleanup of messy art projects, Broderson said.

The libraries, both located on the schools' second floors, have no walls, and are surrounded by classrooms. The arrangement of bookcases and work tables separates the libraries from the classrooms. The high ceiling with skylights preserves the open feeling.

ALTHOUGH SPECIAL education classes are taught at both schools, Nerge also houses the Schaumburg Early Education Center. The center's class, which now has about 124 children, can handle 150 to 170, Tavano said.

Children 3 to 5-years-old with learning difficulties are admitted to the special program after an entrance screening, Tavano said. The ratio of children to adults in the program is 5 to 1, he said, and students in a High School Dist. 211 early childhood education course assist program teachers.

Sprinkling violator gets probation

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Illi-Lusi Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedrava faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

The open house, which includes dancing, will start at 8:30 p.m. at the post home, 400 E. Devon Ave.

THE OPEN ENVIRONMENT design of the Enders-Salk building is continued in the learning center, where bookcases and tables take the place of permanent walls. The center contains audio-visual materials as well as books and is bordered by classrooms.

Forest purchase will not harm village: official

The purchase of 105 acres by the Cook County Forest Preserve District in Hoffman Estates will not have a substantial financial impact on the village, a district official says.

Arthur L. Janura, general superintendent for the district, estimated the purchase will take only about $200 in village revenue off the tax rolls

He made the comment Monday in defense of the purchase, which has been attacked by village officials who say the land should be developed as an industrial park to broaden the village's tax base.

VILLAGE PRES. Virginia M. Hayter said Janura missed the point. The parcel was part of the village's long-term plans for industrial growth, she said.

"The potential is wiped out for everybody," she said. "You don't look at what is now; you look at what the potential is."

Using last year's tax records to make his point, Janura said taxes on the parcel at the northwest corner of Shoe Factory Road and Ill. Rte. 59 totaled about $4,000

Of that figure, 76 per cent went to the school district and the remainder was divided among a handful of other taxing bodies including the village, he said.

THE FOREST preserve district passed an ordinance to purchase the parcel in 1968, Janura said, and the village has had eight years to develop the land for industry.

"How long are we going to just sit and wait and sit and wait?" he asked. "If the forest preserve did that, we wouldn't have any properties."

Mrs. Hayter said the village has had inquiries about the land. One proposal for it was turned down a few years ago, she said, because the village wanted to wait until the proper services could be provided to the property.

Janura also said that industrial use of the parcel would "not be compatible" with the surrounding area.

"INDUSTRY GOING into that particular parcel is certainly not going to contribute to the uses of the adjoining forest preserve lands," he said.

Janura also responded Monday to a number of other points raised by village officials following disclosure of the sale of the parcel last week:

- He said the district was not trying to keep its actions on the parcel secret from the village.

Although the deal was finalized Sept. 3, Janura had referred to the matter as a "proposed acquisition" in a Sept. 8 letter to Mrs. Hayter. That wording was used, he said, because a different department was handling the purchase, and he was unaware that the sale had been completed.

Lincoln County gains a friend?

Cook County Forest Preserve District's purchase of land in Hoffman Estates is pushing Village Pres. Virginia M. Hayter toward endorsement of the Lincoln County proposal.

"I'm being forced into a position each time we have a problem that maybe the county's too big, that it's a management problem," she says.

Discussing the purchase with the village board a week ago, Mrs. Hayter suggested that a county made up of the suburbs might be more sympathetic toward Hoffman Estates' interests.

"I DIDN'T INTEND to get involved in Lincoln County," she said, "but our constitutional rights are constantly being violated, and they (the county) don't listen."

Saying that she's not making an endorsement, Mrs. Hayter denies that she's using her position on Lincoln County as leverage to get county officials to support village stands.

"It's not a threat. It's a statement," she says. "Maybe certain levels of government ought to take a look at how they manage their affairs."

Her comments were prompted by the disclosure that the forest preserve district has acquired a 105-acre tract on the village's west end while the village was organizing opposition to the purchase. Village officials complained they were not allowed a voice in the matter.

THE VILLAGE board has directed Village Atty. Edward Hofert to petition the county board to conduct such purchases in "an open manner."

Lincoln County proponents say they hope to force a referendum in 1978 for Cook County voters to approve the secession of the 30 suburban townships to form the new county.

"We've got from now until 1978 to get back the right of petition," Mrs. Hayter said.

In general, she says, she doesn't believe in separatism, particularly since the suburbs are so dependent on Chicago.

"It's easier, if we all are mature, and we all get along," she says.

Both schools have some traditional classrooms with four permanent walls. Most of the classrooms, however, have only one permanent wall.

Two sides of the room are hinged panels which can be folded back to combine classrooms. The fourth side of the room is completely open. This side faces the hallway, and unless teachers in adjoining rooms fold back the flexible walls, classrooms remain separated.

About 600 children attend Enders-Salk while Nerge has about 500 students. Many of the children came from the traditional classrooms of Blackhawk and Schaumburg schools, two of the district's older buildings.

THE CHILDREN HAVE adjusted to Enders-Salk, Broderson said, largely through the efforts of their teachers, who have stressed the need for quiet. "The open physical plant hasn't hurt (the children)," he said.

At Nerge, children were given a tour of the building before school began. Discipline and safety were stressed at the orientation, Tavano said, and the children are quiet and orderly in the building. Doubting parents who tour the school "like it when they see it," he said.

Each school's kindergarten room is large enough for two classes and can be divided by a folding flexible wall. The room is carpeted, but a tile rim surrounds the room allowing for easy cleanup of messy art projects, Broderson said.

The libraries, both located on the schools' second floors, have no walls, and are surrounded by classrooms. The arrangement of bookcases and work tables separates the libraries from the classrooms. The high ceiling with skylights preserves the open feeling.

ALTHOUGH SPECIAL education classes are taught at both schools,

Chinese leaders urge crackdown on disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

Suit filed to retain bus service

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes filed suit Monday seeking to prevent the Illinois Dept. of Transportation from cutting off bus service for employes to its new Schaumburg headquarters.

The class action suit filed in Cook County Circuit Court charges that cutting the commuter service will violate the constitutional rights of about 140 workers from Chicago and Elgin who have no other means of transportation and, as a result, may be forced to resign.

Schaumburg is 20 miles from the Chicago city limits and 15 miles from Elgin, with no convenient public transportation from either location, the suit charges.

About 785 employes work at the transportation office, 1000 Plaza Dr. The offices were located in Chicago's Marina City and Elgin until April 1, 1975.

IDOT agreed to provide bus service to Schaumburg from three locations and seven additional state cars to

Party gears up for election

Schaumburg United Party faithfuls have begun to gear up for the April village election.

Members of the party's executive board have started planning SUPs late October convention when nominees will be selected for three trustee posts, said Village Pres. Raymond Kessell, party chairman.

Kessell said he soon expects to name a deputy party chairman who will be responsible for "much of the leg work" needed before the campaign begins in February.

THE ORGANIZATION is forming a campaign staff and Laurel DuLaney has been appointed platform chairwoman. Mrs. DuLaney said she is putting a platform committee together and soon will announce a schedule of public hearings in order to have the document completed for adoption at the convention.

At stake are posts held by Trustees Herbert J. Aigner, Ray LeBeau and Nels Hornstrom.

For more than two years Aigner has said he would not seek a third term, although Kessell predicts the veteran board member will have a change of heart and allow his name to be placed in nomination.

Although LeBeau and Hornstrom have not indicated they will be candidates for reelection, both are expected to be on the party ticket.

LeBEAU WAS ELECTED to a four-year term in 1973, and Hornstrom won a two year term in 1975.

As the party lines up its strategy, leaders of the Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress say they are in the preliminary stages of planning for next year's election.

The new party was formed two years ago and despite its loss in 1975, members have stuck together and say they will run three candidates in the next election.

ONE OF TWO to open this fall, Nerge School is the 28th school in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54. Nerge was built at a cost to the district of $712,975. Enders-Salk School was built at a cost of $861,415. Part of the total cost was paid by the state.

Allow flexibility in teaching

Nerge also houses the Schaumburg Early Education Center. The center's class, which now has about 124 children, can handle 150 to 170, Tavano said.

Children 3 to 5-years-old with learning difficulties are admitted to the special program after an entrance screening, Tavano said. The ratio of children to adults in the program is 5 to 1, he said, and students in a High School Dist. 211 early childhood education course assist program teachers.

The special education classes at Enders-Salk use several traditional classrooms, Broderson said. Music classes at both schools also use these classrooms, but at Nerge, the few four-walled rooms have no special function.

All of Nerge's 32 teachers are women, but three of the 23 Enders-Salk teachers are men. Children are surprised by the male teachers at first, as are their parents, Broderson said.

HE CALLED IT a "desirable shock" when parents discover their child's teacher is a man. He said some parents have requested more male elementary teachers so their child can have male authority figures around them during the day.

Although the schools are designed to create an open environment, education remains traditional. "Our philosophy of education is back to essentials," Tavano said.

Bobby Riggs accepts bait, he'll show up

In Las Vegas sometime in November, tennis hustler Bobby Riggs and an Elk Grove Village firm's resident hustler will meet in a cardboard court tennis match for $10,000.

To promote its new board game called "15 Love," the House of Games, 2633 Greenleaf Ave., last July challenged Riggs to a $10,000 winner-take-all match. The firm will be represented by Biggs Calderhead, a member of the company's Canadian staff who helped design the game and who is featured on its cover.

After a few months of negotiations, company president Jack Hirsch said Riggs accepted a modified challenge. "Enough of your Canadian capers," Riggs says in his letter to Calderhead. "I will teach you the lesson of your life about what tennis is all about."

TERMS OF THE match are not complete, but Riggs will be guaranteed $5,000 if he loses or ties — the standard fee for a Riggs' appearance since his nationally televised loss to pro Billie Jean King in straight sets. He will get $10,000 if he wins.

Whether their champion, Calderhead, wins or loses, the game firm will donate copies of the game to veterans' hospitals in the Los Angeles area, Hirsch said. "If Riggs loses, we'll be able to afford giving a few more away," Hirsch said.

"We're still drawing up the regulations for the match, but it probably will be a best of seven games," Hirsch said.

Famed odds-maker Jimmy the Greek is being asked to serve as scorekeeper and set the prematch odds.

HIRSCH SAID there is "an outside chance" the match might be televised. He has contacted Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, the "Dinah Shore Show" and Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" about the match.

Previous House of Games' promotions have included sending copies of its "Project CIA" game to several officials in Washington, D.C. including then CIA Director William Colby, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and President Ford. The company also has furnished area libraries with free copies of its games.

Woman gets probation for sprinkling violation

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lusi Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedram faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

$6.1 million seen for lake water

If Elk Grove Village were to obtain Lake Michigan water by itself, it would have to spend an estimated $6.1 million during the next five years, Village Mgr. Charles Willis said.

Willis estimates the village would have to spend $2,979,000 in water system improvemements, plus another $2,204,000 for facilities to bring water from Chicago to Elk Grove Village. The remainder would be in legal, engineering and contingency fees.

"Preliminary estimates suggest our costs wold be less it other cities were in the program," Willis said.

Eight Northwest suburban communities, including Elk Grove Village, belong to SHARE + 3, a coalition trying to obtain Lake Michigan water. Willis, said, however, it is premature to project the involvement of other SHARE + 3 members.

THE ELK GROVE village cost estimate was drawn up so that the village can begin generating funds — partially through proposed water rate increases — and be able to begin construction as soon as it receives a lake water allocation. The lack of an allocation has prevented Chicago from selling lake water to the village.

Willis said internal water system improvements are needed because the system is designed to handle and distribute water from several wells rather than from a single source.

In a multiple-source water system, assistant village engineer Pete Kaleta said, the transmission pipes all can be the same pipe. When the water comes from a single source, however, it must flow through pipes of gradually decreasing size to maintain pressure.

The village's transmission lines now are 12 inches in diameter, but some would have to be replaced with 36-inch pipes if the village obtains Lake Michigan water on its own, Kaleta said.

THE VILLAGE also would have to construct pumping stations and storage tanks.

Two sites are under consideration for the additional water storage. One is five of the 36 acres the village owns at the northeast corner of Landmeier and Busse roads. Once proposed for a sports arena, 31 acres of the site have been put up for sale by the village.

The second potential water storage site is land immediately west of the planned Meacham Road fire station, off the Biesterfield road extension.

Willis' estimate of the cost of Lake Michigan water does not include any money for additional facilities at the lake possibly needed to obtain adequate amounts of water.

Library to cut book, materials buying: official

The Rolling Meadows Public Library again must cut back severely on books and materials purchases for the next year, libraraian Judith Drescher said.

There will be no new programs, and without additional staff, the library cannot extend its hours as planned, she added.

"Despite all our plans, we will have to live with the same budget we have this year and will not be able to do any of the things we planned," she said.

THE LIBRARY finance committee will meet at 7 p.m. tonight, at 3110 Martin Ln., to try to reduce its budget by about $100,000.

That was the amount board members hoped to collect through a higher tax rate approved by the voters in a referendum in February. They had planned to spend it on four new staff members, longer operating hours and new books.

But the library learned several weeks ago that its tax rate for this year will be based on an earlier, smaller budget.

"As usual, books will be the first to go," Mrs. Drescher sad. "We had expected to finally be able to spend some money for books, perhaps as much as $40,000 worth, but that is no longer possible. All of our plans will have to wait until next year.

"We can't just not pay people," she added, "and the library must pay its utility bills and other fixed costs."

SHE ADDED THAT she does not expect the library to cut hours or services, but its book budget may drop to $20,000.

The final decision on budget cuts rests with the board, she said, "but it's safe to assume that what we planned to do with the extra funds will not now be possible."

Mrs. Drescher said four new employes were to be hired in late 1977 and in 1978 when the extra tax revenue was expected.

"This would have allowed us to offer expanded adult services and be open later evenings and perhaps weekends. We will now probably have to wait an additional year before hiring people," she said.

BEFORE IT LEARNED of the tax mixup, the board had bought a $38,000 site next to its present building.

The library paid $1,000 then but owes Kimball Hill, owner of the property, $37,000 for the 1.7-acre site. Library officials say funds for the purchase may come from its expected tax revenue, but, if not, they plan to seek a bank loan.

Library treasurer John Lund said Hill has agreed to wait until October 1977 for the money.

"We will honor the purchase contract," he added.

Lund said other cuts will have to be examined individually.

Auditors mull school conversion

The Palatine Township Board of Auditors Monday expressed interest in a plan to convert Palatine High School into a municipal building, and passed a resolution calling for a "reasonable hour" to discuss the plans with the village and park district.

Township auditors said they were surprised to learn in a newspaper story that they were expected to meet at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 5 with representatives from other government bodies and architects preparing the plans.

Curtis Tice, president of the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn., said a letter informing the township of the meeting to discuss plans for the high school should have arrived "by today (Monday) easily."

THE AUDITORS ALSO said they did not like having the meeting scheduled in the morning because they will be working and unable to attend.

Auditor Charles Zimmerman, said the township would be "happy to participate" in the sessions but the time was "very, very difficult for us to get to."

Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said there was no notation of the meeting on the township calender.

Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he had contacted a representative of the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn. Monday after reading the article, and intended to bring it up later during the meeting. "There has been nothing happening behind the scenes," Olsen said.

The Oct. 5 intergovernmental meeting will focus on a study by the architects on four functions for the 1965 portion of Palatine High School, which is about 73,000 square feet. The functions include general administration for the township and village, and police and recreational use.

IN A REPORT submitted earlier this year to the architects, Unteed and Associates of Palatine, the township projected a future space need of about 10,000 square feet.

Th e high t.

The high school, 150 E. Wood St., is owned by High School Dist. 211. School district officials have not discussed a selling price for the building.

Tice, said he did not know who scheduled the meeting in the morning, but agreed it was a bad time.

"This is far too important to be scheduled at a bad time," Tice said. But he could not say whether it would be rescheduled to accommodate the township.

Sky's the limit for these taxi drivers

by DIANE MERMIGAS

It's no ordinary flight service that shuttles around politicians and entertainers one minute and scatters the ashes of the dead across the countryside the next.

The charter pilots at Pal-Waukee Airport, Palatine Road and Milwaukee Avenue, after all, is anything but an ordinary transportation service — one that is often used by the public for the oddest jobs.

The dozen or so pilots work around the clock running errands to every part of the country, delivering people and cargo to farflung destinations.

"We really fill a void in the business by helping companies or individuals who need to get somewhere fast but don't want to take a regular airline flight and don't have their own private planes," said Charles Priester, head of the charter division, and co-owner and operator of the airport with his father, George.

THE AVERAGE OF 10 charters a day and 75 a week seldom leaves the division's three Lear jets and eight propeller planes idle.

One pilot might leave before dawn to fly a local corporate head to New York for a breakfast meeting and then return him for lunch in Chicago.

Another pilot might take off with a political candidate for a week-long airport-hopping campaign downstate or take on the dubious distinction of chauffeuring entertainers such as Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds around the Midwest for a concert tour.

No two requests are alike and one never knows how a job will go since the pilot has the mechanical complexities of the plane, the temperamental whims of Mother Nature and the uncanny reactions of his passengers to deal with, Priester said.

"Once I was scheduled to fly a businessman to Houston for the day. I didn't get back here until almost a month later. He paid me to fly him from one coast to the other and even into Mexico for other business. We saw everything," he said.

NOTABLES SUCH AS Bill Cosby, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Gov. Richard Ogilvie have been passengers in Priester's plane during the 21 years he has been flying.

Entertainers and politicians usually sit quietly preoccupied while the pilot takes care of things up front, Priester said.

"It's a thrill to meet and fly people like that. But it's always the ordinary, everyday types who leave me with something to think about," he said.

The hourly rates of $610 to charter a Lear jet and $80 to hire a prop plane and pilot doesn't deter people from using time in the air for whatever they like.

One fanciful young man picked a plane ride over Lake Michigan to propose to his girlfriend who cried throughout the return trip, Priester said.

ONE ELDERLY MAN, taking his first air trip sat rigid and silent, his sweaty palms over his eyes, during a two-hour trip to New York and then got off the plane raving about the flight.

As in any business, things don't always go as planned. Freight has been delivered to the wrong location and

Chinese leaders urge crackdown on disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

Flu-shot signup for seniors urged

The elderly and chronically ill of Palatine Township should register for the swine flu inoculations with senior citizens' groups to which they belong, Marvin Schramm, program coordinator, said Monday.

Schramm said new dates for the inoculations have not been set, but he expects them to begin in late October. Registration forms for the elderly and chronically ill will be available from senior citizens' groups, pharmacies and the township hall, 37 N. Plum Grove Rd.

A CHANGE IN Cook County regulations for the inoculation programs makes those 60 years old eligible for the bivalent vaccine, which protects against two strains of flu. The original plans had listed those 65 and older as "elderly."

The chronically ill include persons between the ages of 18 and 59 who have chronis heart disease, respiratory problems, kidney disease, diabetes or poor health in general. The chronically ill must bring a certification ticket from their doctor to qualify for the bivalent inoculation.

Schramm said the elderly of the township may register with The American Assn. of Retired Persons, Harper College Senior Citizens' Group, St. Theresa's Leisure Club, Golden Years of St. Paul's Church, Rolling Meadows Senior Citizens' Club and at the Palatine Township Senior Citizens' Center.

THE BANKS OF SALT Creek in Rolling Meadows get a face-lift as part of the Salt Creek Watershed Flood Control project. The creek between Ill. Rte. 62 and Ill. Rte. 58 has been deepened, and crews are placing stones on the banks to prevent further erosion.

Woman gets probation for sprinkling violation

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lusi Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedram faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

$10,000 cardboard tennis match

Riggs accepts bait, he'll show up

In Las Vegas sometime in November, tennis hustler Bobby Riggs and an Elk Grove Village firm's resident hustler will meet in a cardboard court tennis match for $10,000.

To promote its new board game called "15 Love," the House of Games, 2633 Greenleaf Ave., last July challenged Riggs to a $10,000 winner-take-all match. The firm will be represented by Biggs Calderhead, a member of the company's Canadian staff who helped design the game and who is featured on its cover.

After a few months of negotiations, company president Jack Hirsch said Riggs accepted a modified challenge. "Enough of your Canadian capers," Riggs says in his letter to Calderhead. "I will teach you the lesson of your life about what tennis is all about."

TERMS OF THE match are not complete, but Riggs will be guaranteed $5,000 if he loses or ties — the standard fee for a Riggs' appearance since his nationally televised loss to pro Billie Jean King in straight sets. He will get $10,000 if he wins.

Whether their champion, Calderhead, wins or loses, the game firm will donate copies of the game to veterans' hospitals in the Los Angeles area, Hirsch said. "If Riggs loses, we'll be able to afford giving a few more away," Hirsch said.

"We're still drawing up the regulations for the match, but it probably will be a best of seven games," Hirsch said.

Famed odds-maker Jimmy the Greek is being asked to serve as scorekeeper and set the prematch odds.

HIRSCH SAID there is "an outside chance" the match might be televised. He has contacted Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, the "Dinah Shore Show" and Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" about the match.

Previous House of Games' promotions have included sending copies of its "Project CIA" game to several officials in Washington, D.C. including then CIA Director William Colby, U.S. Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, and President Ford. The company also has furnished area libraries with free copies of its games.

even the wrong passengers have been flown on a trip due to communications mix-ups, he said.

Requests such as the one to scatter the ashes of someone who has been cremated to the four winds, "don't happen very often, but they do happen," Priester said.

Although the hours and work are irregular, Joe Leardi has been flying charters out of Pal-Waukee for 28 years.

"It's a good job and interesting work. I have always liked flying and there is something different you run up against everyday," he said.

FOR LEARDI, THAT has meant making an emergency landing in an alfalfa field, having his plane for the Rolling Stones rock group mobbed by overly enthusiastic fans, transporting patients to the hospital, taking aerial photographs for land planners, and delivering medical assistance to flood-ravaged areas.

"You might say we are like taxis or minutemen in the sky. But, after a while the requests don't particularly strike you," he said.

"It's all in a day's work."

Park district seeks board candidates

The Rolling Meadows Park District is seeking candidates to serve on the board.

Only three persons have expressed interest in filling the board vacancy created Aug. 31 by the resignation of Louis Oliverio.

Park Board Pres. Jerry Hodlmair asked park district residents interested in serving out Oliverio's term to contact him.

Hodlmair said resumes may be sent to him at the Park District administrative office, 1 Park Meadow Ln.

Oliverio resigned because of increased job responsibilities. His term ends April, 1977.

Hodlmair said he hopes to make an appointment to the board at its Oct. 26 meeting. The board's Oct. 19 meeting has been rescheduled to that date.

Hennessy heads businessmen's unit

The Christian Business Men's Assn. recently elected new officers. They are:

John Hennessy, chairman; Lewis Case, vice chairman; and Bob Sohn and Bill McMinn committeemen.

The officers are all Rolling Meadows men but the association's members are from throughout the Northwest suburban area, Hennessy said.

The association meets every second Wednesday of the month.

Persons interested in membersip may contact Hennessy at 394-8500.

Jaycees urging voter registrations

The Rolling Meadows Jaycees are conducting a door-to-door canvass of the city to encourage residents to register to vote.

"The voter registration drive will in no way be an attempt to sway voters opinions about who they want to vote for," Jaycee Pres. Jim Mathieson, said.

Residents still have an opportunity to register Tuesday, Oct. 5 when precinct registration will be accepted.

Rolling Meadows firefighters have not determined the cause of a minor apartment fire Monday at 4724 Arbor Dr.

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said the fire in the Whispering Glen apartment complex was reported by neighbors and was confined to the living room of a second-floor apartment.

"We estimated about $500 worth of damage to paneling in the living room and are investigating the incident," he said.

PAINTING THE GARAGE door is a lot more fun and interesting when the painter is an artist such as Lori Mellon, an interior design student at Harper College. Lori repainted the family garage door at 135 Arlene St., Palatine, to add a little color and design. She came up with some of her favorite cartoon characters to dress up the panels, with Mickey Mouse handling the signoff.

School building conversion plan attracts interest

The Palatine Township Board of Auditors Monday expressed interest in a plan to convert Palatine High School into a municipal building, and passed a resolution calling for a "reasonable hour" to discuss the plans with the village and park district.

Township auditors said they were surprised to learn in a newspaper story that they were expected to meet at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 5 with representatives from other government bodies and architects preparing the plans.

Curtis Tice, president of the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn., said a letter informing the township of the meeting to discuss plans for the high school should have arrived "by today (Monday) easily."

THE AUDITORS ALSO said they did not like having the meeting scheduled in the morning because they will be working and unable to attend.

Auditor Charles Zimmerman, said the township would be "happy to participate" in the sessions but the time was "very, very difficult for us to get to."

Township Clerk Ruth Ellen Blowney said there was no notation of the meeting on the township calender.

Township Supervisor Howard Olsen said he had contacted a representative of the North Central Palatine Neighborhood Assn. Monday after reading the article, and intended to bring it up later during the meeting. "There has been nothing happening behind the scenes," Olsen said.

The Oct. 5 intergovernmental meeting will focus on a study by the architects on four functions for the 1965 portion of Palatine High School, which is about 73,000 square feet. The functions include general administration for the township and village, and police and recreational use.

IN A REPORT submitted earlier this year to the architects, Unteed and Associates of Palatine, the township projected a future space need of about 10,000 square feet.

Th e high t.

The high school, 150 E. Wood St., is owned by High School Dist. 211. School district officials have not discussed a selling price for the building.

Tice said he did not know who scheduled the meeting in the morning, but agreed it was a bad time.

"This is far too important to be scheduled at a bad time," Tice said. But he could not say whether it would be rescheduled to accommodate the township.

Cafe loses 4 a.m. license bid

Buffet International, 343 W. Northwest Hwy., Palatine, recently granted a live entertainment license, Monday night was denied a new liquor license classification which would have permitted the establishment to stay open until 4 a.m.

The Palatine Village Board, following a recommendation by Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, voted unanimously to deny the request by restaurant owner Tony Greco. The board acted in its capacity as the Village liquor control commission, of which Jones serves as chairman.

Jones said his recommendation was based on a review of the matter in light of testimony before the zoning board when Greco first applied for a live entertainment ordinance. Jones said the testimony showed that a Class D liquor license, which allows the sale of alcoholic beverages in restaurants until 1 a.m. on weekdays and 3 a.m. on weekends, was sufficient.

GRECO TOLD the board that since he obtained the live entertainment license last month, he has been drawing larger crowds to the restaurant. He said in order to entice big name bands to the restaurant, he needs to be open later.

He said union regulations in many cases force him to pay bands and musicians for 30 hours of work each week which means they must start playing early in the evening when crowds are sparce.

Jones told Greco such considerations should have been brought to the board's attention when the restaurant owner sought his license for live entertainment last month.

"It seems to me the ordinance and license you have permits you to do what you want to do," Jones said.

Trustees also said that to award Greco a Class AA license, which would permit the restaurant to remain open until 4 a.m., the board would have to increase the number of Class AA licenses permitted by local ordinance from four to five, a move the trustees were unwilling to make.

The board earlier in the meeting voted to pass an ordinance limiting to 40 the number of liquor licenses which may be issued in the village.

In a related matter, the board approved a request from the new owners of the former Pankau Pharmacy, 263 E. Northwest Hwy., to transfer the store's Class B liquor license to the new owners. The store will be known as Plaza Pharmacy and will be owned by Milton S. Bower of Chicago and Marvin H. Goeke of Oak Park.

Candidate-seeking effort stymied

Palatine Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Monday said he is having little success in his effort to find new faces to present to the local Republican convention, but he has not abandoned the effort.

"It's a tough job talking people into taking on that kind of position," Coughlin said, "because the type of people we need are already very busy."

Coughlin, a Republican who has had a falling out with local GOP members including Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, said this summeo he was attempting to find new candidates to present for party endorsement in December at the local convention.

THE GOP CONVENTION, scheduled Dec. 4, will select a slate of candidates to run in the village election next April.

Jones announced last week he will not seek reelection and incumbent Trustees Robert J. Guss, James L. Shaw and Richard W. Fonte have said they are undecided about seeking reelection.

Coughlin, commenting on Jones' decision, said only, "I think his family is entitled to see him after 10 years." Jones has been a trustee for six years and served a four-year-term as village president.

Coughlin said he will not run for village president, but said Jones' decision "opens it up" for others.

"I have no one specifically in mind to present to the convention," Coughlin said. He said he hopes to present new candidates for both trustee and village president to the convention.

CONCERNING HIS OWN position, Coughlin said he is "never going to run for village president as long as I can be productive (in business) and that's at least another 20 years."

Coughlin was elected to a two-year-term on the village board in 1973 on the GOP slate headed by Jones. He was reelected to a full four year term in 1975.

Grand jury indicts broker

A Buffalo Grove man was indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury Monday for allegedly defrauding the Church Federation of Greater Chicago of more than $60,000.

Steven J. Miller, 265 Belaire Ct., was former finance chairman of the federation.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott said Miller, 31, a stockbroker, was charged with three counts of theft and securities law violations.

Miller served as the volunteer finance committee chairman of the federation for about a year beginning in 1974, Scott said. The alleged offfenses took place between January and August of 1975, he said.

Scott said Miller is accused of misappropriating a $60,444.28 commercial note by depositing it in the bank account of a Skokie apartment complex in which Miller has a major interest.

Miller allegedly supplied the federation with false brokerage house receipts that showed the money was being reinvested for the federation, Scott said.

Miller was unavailable for comment Monday night.

China seeks halt to civil disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

Hersey band wins first at band day

The Hersey High School marching band won first place in the annual High School Band Day competition Sept. 18 at Illinois State. This is the fifth time the musical group from the school, 1900 E. Thomas Ave., Arlington Heights, has received the honor.

The marching band from Fremd High School, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine, placed third in the competition.

Hope seen for rebirth of downtowns

by LINDA PUNCH

In an era of booming suburban shopping malls and failing cities, urban planner David R. Outhred still sees hope for the survival of downtown business districts.

Outhred, who is involved in downtown redevelopment projects in Wheeling, Des Plaines and Palatine, said downtown business areas are surviving despite the exodus to outlying shopping malls.

"Downtown areas are being written off, but they're still there. They're not dead yet and people are saying 'Hey let's not let them die completely,'" he said.

Outhred said local governments are beginning to realize that the downtown area "means something to a community."

"THERE'S A LOT of interest now in preservation. In places like Wheeling with a historical past, if you start tearing down buildings, you're tearing down the past," he said.

Outhred, who started his career as an architect in Sydney, Australia, has taken part in urban planning projects in Trenton, N.J., and other East Coast areas. He was hired by the State of Illinois about a year ago to implement a downtown improvement program for communities throughout the state. Now he is an independent consultant.

Outhred said the main thrust of the program "is a self-help approach to downtown improvement."

"Local merchants and community groups are more involved in decision-making. It's not all handed out to consultants," he said.

A high level of community involvement has "distinct advantages," including decreasing the cost of developing a program, Outhred said.

"You involve people who have first-hand knowledge of the problems. It increases your chances for success because of that involvement," he said.

OUTHRED SAID many highly publicized downtown redevelopment projects have failed because some "solutions are applied to situations without proper analysis — a solution which in that case is not appropriate."

"People see things that are successful in some situations and say 'Hey, let's do that here.' They don't realize that subtle conditions can make or break it," he said.

Outhred said some communities have invested in downtown malls only to have "someone build a new shopping center at either end of town.

"Projects often fail because of bad publicity or promotion. An energetic downtown improvement association or merchants group can really do a lot," he said.

URBAN PLANNER David R. Outhred says local participation is an important ingredient in any plan for downtown redevelopment in Wheeling, Des Plaines and Palatine.

Sky's the limit for these airborne taxi drivers

by DIANE MERMIGAS

It's no ordinary flight service that shuttles around politicians and entertainers one minute and scatters the ashes of the dead across the countryside the next.

The charter pilots at Pal-Waukee Airport, Palatine Road and Milwaukee Avenue, after all, is anything but an ordinary transportation service — one that is often used by the public for the oddest jobs.

The dozen or so pilots work around the clock running errands to every part of the country, delivering people and cargo to farflung destinations.

"We really fill a void in the business by helping companies or individuals who need to get somewhere fast but don't want to take a regular airline flight and don't have their own private planes," said Charles Priester, head of the charter division, and co-owner and operator of the airport with his father, George.

THE AVERAGE OF 10 charters a day and 75 a week seldom leaves the division's three Lear jets and eight propeller planes idle.

One pilot might leave before dawn to fly a local corporate head to New York for a breakfast meeting and then return him for lunch in Chicago.

Another pilot might take off with a political candidate for a week-long airport-hopping campaign downstate or take on the dubious distinction of chauffeuring entertainers such as Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds around the Midwest for a concert tour.

No two requests are alike and one never knows how a job will go since the pilot has the mechanical complexities of the plane, the temperamental whims of Mother Nature and the uncanny reactions of his passengers to deal with, Priester said.

"Once I was scheduled to fly a businessman to Houston for the day. I didn't get back here until almost a month later. He paid me to fly him from one coast to the other and even into Mexico for other business. We saw everything," he said.

NOTABLES SUCH AS Bill Cosby, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Gov. Richard Ogilvie have been passengers in Priester's plane during the 21 years he has been flying.

Entertainers and politicians usually sit quietly preoccupied while the pilot takes care of things up front, Priester said.

"It's a thrill to meet and fly people like that. But it's always the ordinary, everyday types who leave me with something to think about," he said.

The hourly rates of $610 to charter a Lear jet and $80 to hire a prop plane and pilot doesn't deter people from using time in the air for whatever they like.

One fanciful young man picked a plane ride over Lake Michigan to propose to his girlfriend who cried throughout the return trip, Priester said.

ONE ELDERLY MAN, taking his first air trip sat rigid and silent, his sweaty palms over his eyes, during a two-hour trip to New York and then got off the plane raving about the flight.

As in any business, things don't always go as planned. Freight has been delivered to the wrong location and even the wrong passengers have been flown on a trip due to communications mix-ups, he said.

Requests such as the one to scatter the ashes of someone who has been cremated to the four winds, "don't happen very often, but they do happen," Priester said.

Although the hours and work are irregular, Joe Leardi has been flying charters out of Pal-Waukee for 28 years.

"It's a good job and interesting work. I have always liked flying and there is something different you run up against everyday," he said.

FOR LEARDI, THAT has meant making an emergency landing in an alfalfa field, having his plane for the Rolling Stones rock group mobbed by overly enthusiastic fans, transporting patients to the hospital, taking aerial photographs for land planners, and delivering medical assistance to flood-ravaged areas.

"You might say we are like taxis or minutemen in the sky. But, after a while the requests don't particularly strike you," he said.

"It's all in a day's work."

2 years probation on sprinkling rap

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lusi Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedram faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

$50,000 for Little City

The recent Fourth Annual Variety Club Kup Open golf tournament raised $50,000 toward construction of the Variety Club-Karny Kupcinet Center for mentally retarded children at Little City, Palatine.

Little City is a residential training center for mentally retarded children and adults.

Suit filed to retain bus service

The American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes filed suit Monday seeking to prevent the Illinois Dept. of Transportation from cutting off bus service for employes to its new Schaumburg headquarters.

The class action suit filed in Cook County Circuit Court charges that cutting the commuter service will violate the constitutional rights of about 140 workers from Chicago and Elgin who have no other means of transportation and, as a result, may be forced to resign.

Schaumburg is 20 miles from the Chicago city limits and 15 miles from Elgin, with no convenient public transportation from either location, the suit charges.

About 785 employes work at the transportation office, 1000 Plaza Dr. The offices were located in Chicago's Marina City and Elgin until April 1, 1975.

IDOT agreed to provide bus service to Schaumburg from three locations and seven additional state cars to transport workers, the suit says, but department Director Langhorne Bond ordered the service stopped as of Friday.

The suit charges the transportation service costs less than one fourth of 1 per cent of the department budget.

The suit asks the court to issue an injunction preventing IDOT from stopping the bus service.

Panel to mull business area study

A study of Palatine's central business district, which suggests the area is best suited to become a professional office center, is being reviewed by the plan commission.

The study, prepared by independent planner David Outhred, lists several goals for the downtown area as well as policies to be considered for the area. Among the goals are adequate parking, a safer pedestrian environment and a broader range of stores.

The plan commission is expected to study the report at several meetings before sending the document to the planning, building and zoning committee.

The committee also will review the report before it is presented to the full village board.

The report is expected to be adopted by the board in a resolution stating the study will represent the general policy of the village toward downtown redevelopment.

Outhred, now preparing a study of the Wheeling business district along Milwaukee Avenue, prepared the downtown Palatine report in conjunction with the Palatine-Des Plaines Central Business District Pilot Project. The project was started and funded by the Illinois Dept. of Local Government Affairs.

Two banks pledge $2,000 for village historical unit

Two Palatine banks have joined the list of contributors to the Palatine Historical Society's museum development fund.

A $1,500 pledge from the Palatine National Bank and a $500 pledge from the Suburban National Bank were announced by Willis A. Glassgow, co-chairman of the museum development committee.

The bank pledges bring the total amount of money or pledges for the fund to more than $13,000.

The committee, chaired by Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, has set a goal of $44,000 to be used to refurbish the society's museum, 224 E. Palatine Rd.

COMMITTEE OFFICIALS have said they plan to seek a pledge from a major foundation before focusing their efforts on community donations.

A special brochure describing the museum has been sent to the Palatine Community Council to distribute to its member agencies to solicit funds for the drive. In addition, the Chamber of Commerce also will circulate the brochure to its members asking for contributions.

The committee, organized in June, originally had hoped to meet its goal by Labor Day, but the campaign has been extended.

Committee members plan to meet in about three weeks to discuss the drive and to get reports on collections from each division chairman. The campaign is focusing on three divisions, including large businesses outside the village, village businesses and individual contributions.

Can't stop eating 'em.

Time out for a snack

Most blue herons have migrated south for the winter season, but one straggler decided to eat a hearty meal in the Des Plaines River near Wheeling before making the trip.

Like a boxer feinting jabs with his opponent, the blue heron stuck his long neck in the shallow water, gulping down a catch of fish every minute or two.

Utility company purchase topic of meeting today

Representatives of several homeowners' groups tonight will meet with the village board to discuss purchasing the Citizens Utilities water and sewer system now serving a portion of Mount Prospect

The meeting begins at 7:30 p.m. in the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St.

Mayor Robert D. Teichert has sent letters to 10 homeowners' associations, saying the cost of acquiring the water and sewer lines must come from the pocketbooks of those using the system. The investor-owned utility now serves about 2,300 Mount Prospect customers in the northeast section of the village.

TEICHERT SAID the purpose of the meeting is to determine if acquisition should be pursued and if so, at what cost. The mayor said if the residents agree with an acceptable purchase price, the village will act as their agent in the transaction.

Mount Prospect, at the request of the Citizens Utilities customers living in the village, has been studying for nearly three years the possible purchase of the water and sewer lines.

A feasibility study released last year has estimated it would cost $4.9 million to buy the utility's system in the village. Residents requested the study after having been charged higher rates for what they call a lower-quality product than those using village water.

Teichert has said residents could pay for purchasing the utility lines through an increase in their rates or a special assessment on the quarterly water bills.

2 years probation on sprinkling rap

A Mount Prospect woman has been put on two years probation but was not fined for violating the village's sprinkling restriction in the first test of the water conservation ordinance.

Pat Bedrava, 122 S. Hi-Lust Ave., was placed under two years of "court supervision" by Circuit Court Judge John Gannon for sprinkling at an unauthorized time under village ordinance.

"It's a mild form of probation," Judge Gannon said Monday. "All we want is compliance." Mrs. Bedrava does not have to report to a court officer during the two years of probation.

If she is found guilty again of violating the sprinkling ordinance during her probation period, Mrs. Bedrava could be fined up to $500.

Police issued Mrs. Bedrava the citation Aug. 8 for sprinkling between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Of the 50 persons cited, she is the only sprinkling ordinance offender who chose to take her case to court rather than pay the fine, Village Atty. John J. Zimmermann said.

The ordinance, in effect since Aug. 1, was adopted by the village board in an effort to conserve water and avoid future shortages in Mount Prospect. The new law prohibits sprinkling on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Residents also are not permitted to sprinkle their lawns between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

"We are serious about water conservation in Mount Prospect," Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said, stressing the penality Mrs. Bedram faces is a stiff one.

Eppley said he has received several calls from residents saying the restriction should be lifted because the weather is cooler and there has been more rain than during the summer months.

Eppley said, however, "We have no seasonal changes planned. It will be ing the Citizens Utilities water and nance stays as far as I'm concerned."

Chinese leaders seek to halt civil disorders

HONG KONG (UPI) — A provincial committee of the Chinese Communist party has called for a crackdown on strikes, sabotage, "beating, smashing and looting" in the first official indication of civil disorders since the death of Mao Tse-tung, according to reports from China Monday.

The party leaders of Tsinghai Province in northwest China also warned against "erroneous words and deeds" in a reference to the power struggle in the post-Mao era.

THE DEMAND for action against troublemakers did not say when the disturbances had occurred. But it came in a meeting that began three days after Mao's funeral.

In a weekend broadcast, Tsinghai radio said the committee leaders attending the Sept. 21-23 meeting of the provincial capital of Sining "held that it was necessary to pay close attention to the new trends of class struggle."

"It is essential to resolutely suppress counterrevolutionaries and those who engage in beating, smashing and looting," the radio quoted committee members saying.

"It is necessary to resolutely expose and deal blows at a tiny group of class enemies who spread rumors to create confusion, disrupt public order, instigate a stoppage of work and production and engage in other sabotage," the report said.

Hersey band wins first at band day

The Hersey High School marching band won first place in the annual High School Band Day competition Sept. 18 at Illinois State. This is the fifth time the musical group from the school, 1900 E. Thomas Ave., Arlington Heights, has received the honor.

The marching band from Fremd High School, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine, placed third in the competition.

Following the competition, the Hersey group performed its winning show, "A Classical Gas," during halftime at the Illinois State-Marshall football game.

Rev. Shantz installed

The Rev. Roger Shantz was installed Sunday as pastor at the Des Plaines Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, 382 S. Mount Prospect Rd., Des Plaines. Rev. Shantz, a graduate of St. Paul Bible College, has been serving as interim pastor in St. Cloud, Minn.

They'll fly you almost anywhere

by DIANE MERMIGAS

It's no ordinary flight service that shuttles around politicians and entertainers one minute and scatters the ashes of the dead across the countryside the next.

The charter pilots at Pal-Waukee Airport, Palatine Road and Milwaukee Avenue, after all, is anything but an ordinary transportation service — one that is often used by the public for the oddest jobs.

The dozen or so pilots work around the clock running errands to every part of the country, delivering people and cargo to farflung destinations.

"We really fill a void in the business by helping companies or individuals who need to get somewhere fast but don't want to take a regular airline flight and don't have their own private planes," said Charles Priester, head of the charter division, and co-owner and operator of the airport with his father, George.

THE AVERAGE OF 10 charters a day and 75 a week seldom leaves the division's three Lear jets and eight propeller planes idle.

One pilot might leave before dawn to fly a local corporate head to New York for a breakfast meeting and then return him for lunch in Chicago.

Another pilot might take off with a political candidate for a week-long airport-hopping campaign downstate or take on the dubious distinction of chauffeuring entertainers such as Frank Sinatra and the Osmonds around the Midwest for a concert tour.

No two requests are alike and one never knows how a job will go since the pilot has the mechanical complexities of the plane, the temperamental whims of Mother Nature and the uncanny reactions of his passengers to deal with, Priester said.

"Once I was scheduled to fly a businessman to Houston for the day. I didn't get back here until almost a month later. He paid me to fly him from one coast to the other and even into Mexico for other business. We saw everything," he said.

NOTABLES SUCH AS Bill Cosby, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Gov. Richard Ogilvie have been passengers in Priester's plane during the 21 years he has been flying.

Entertainers and politicians usually sit quietly preoccupied while the pilot takes care of things up front, Priester said.

"It's a thrill to meet and fly people like that. But it's always the ordinary, everyday types who leave me with something to think about," he said.

The hourly rates of $610 to charter a Lear jet and $80 to hire a prop plane and pilot doesn't deter people from using time in the air for whatever they like.

One fanciful young man picked a plane ride over Lake Michigan to propose to his girlfriend who cried throughout the return trip, Priester said.

ONE ELDERLY MAN, taking his first air trip sat rigid and silent, his sweaty palms over his eyes, during a two-hour trip to New York and then got off the plane raving about the flight.

As in any business, things don't always go as planned. Freight has been delivered to the wrong location and even the wrong passengers have been flown on a trip due to communications mix-ups, he said.

Requests such as the one to scatter the ashes of someone who has been cremated to the four winds, "don't happen very often, but they do happen," Priester said.

Although the hours and work are irregular, Joe Leardi has been flying charters out of Pal-Waukee for 28 years.

"It's a good job and interesting work. I have always liked flying and there is something different you run up against everyday," he said.

FOR LEARDI, THAT has meant making an emergency landing in an alfalfa field, having his plane for the Rolling Stones rock group mobbed by overly enthusiastic fans, transporting patients to the hospital, taking aerial photographs for land planners, and delivering medical assistance to flood-ravaged areas.

"You might say we are like taxis or minutemen in the sky. But, after a while the requests don't particularly strike you," he said.

"It's all in a day's work."
